Tomorrow is "Father's Day." You might tell father, "Don't work so hard." In these times that will at least make him smile.

You might buy him a cravat, or a box of cigars, and charge it to him. If he is old, you might give him a box of plain chocolates and advise him to eat a little occasionally. Chocolate, sugar in any pure form, is good for the old. Sugar feeds the heart muscles, according to the learned Dr. Leopold Stieglitz, who knows. That helps when father begins working on his income tax.

The best plan for "Father's Day" might be to pat father on the back and say: "We hate to see you work so hard, but we really don't see what can be done about it."

Yesterday was "Flag Day." We have a fine flag, one that means something. That flag will be waving on this North American continent when many others of the world's flags shall have been torn down for good, while those who think we might have a better flag will be decently buried in oblivion.

Mr. Tunney, who was champion heavyweight fighter of the world, really fought, took his two or three millions and retired, saying, "Somebody else can have the championship," was walking toward the Braddock-Baer prize fight, along the farthest outer rim of the bowl, to his "ringside" seat.

There came what reporters call "a thud and a flop." A "preliminary fighter," the weaker of two large, blond, human lumps, hired to amuse the crowd while it waited, had been knocked down.

After scarcely a glance, across the wide bowl, Mr. Tunney observed, "He's out, he will not get up." He was out, and did not get up. "Seest thou a man diligent in his business? He shall stand before kings." Tunney was diligent in his business, learned to know it thoroughly and now stands before

De Valera worked his way up steadily, and closed gamely getting up right at the end for third. Payrack had ridden in an effort to keep up early pace weakened slightly, in the drive. Ogle made up some ground. Yancey was going well at the end, after being outrun early. Anacreon well placed, early tired. Mixed Party displayed early speed, stopping badly through the stretch.

TUGBOAT FRANK ..... — — 2.80

Bright and Early, under restraint while following the pace of Sandy Mack, wore the latter down when called upon and drew out fast through the last three-sixteenths. Torita, unable to keep pace early, moved up leaving the backstretch, saved all possible ground and held on willingly under urging. Tugboat Frank, slow to settle to his best stride, came willingly in the stretch run. Sandy Mack showed good speed for the first half mile tiring thereafter. Plucky Jack was never a factor, racing far back. The Flankman tired after a brief display of speed.

Golden Fate, in closest attendance at the early pace, went to the front when Red Badge began tiring and, drawing clear, was never threatened. Candimate moved up steadily leaving the back stretch and held on authority in the drive, but barely lasted to save off Fairsickle. The latter worked her way up on the outside, lost considerable ground at the stretch turn and closed stoutly in the last furlong. Don Gunman moved up nearing the first turn but was on the inside and unable to gain clear sailing, shuffled back. He was never a threat. Red Badge drew away into a long early lead but stopped through the stretch run.

Identity outran his field to the first turn, drew away into a good lead, was rated along under slight restraint and, responding gamely to hard urging drew out steadily in the last furlong. Dark Hope, restrained early, while in closing contact of the pace, moved up stoutly on the outside and weakened slightly, after making a bid nearing the stretch. Discovery showed good speed from the start, gained good sailing on the inside down the backstretch, stumbled slightly nearing the half-mile pole, bumping Vicar slightly, moved up gamely thereafter. Vicar was well placed all the way, though unable to improve his position in the final drive. Our Count showed some ground. War Glory, hard ridden for the first six furlongs, was unable to reach the leaders. Gallant Mac was bumped at the start. Lynx Eye was always slowly. Gallant Mac bore over when bothered by War Glory.

WORKERS DIG VICTIMS OUT OF WRECKAGE

Several other workmen narrowly escaped.

The injured were all buried in the wreckage from which other workmen removed them with difficulty.

First reports to police were that lightning had struck the new $3,000,000 racing plant, which is situated partly in East Boston and partly in Revere.

The injured were all taken to Massachusetts General Hospital. Two of them were unconscious when taken from the ruins.

The injured are:

RABBEY, ROY, 51 of 5 Avon street, Everett.
TODD, JOHN, 51, 11 Arthur street, Somerville.
BARONENI, JOSEPH, 42, 24 Salem street, North End.
NICHOLSON, M. D., 45, 109 Babson street, Mattapan.
McDONALD, JOSEPH, 10 Austin Park, Boston.

Todd, one of the injured workmen, said at the hospital:

"The stable was only about 25 per cent completed. The upper rights and roof were up but there were no walls.

"A streak of wind struck it and the first thing we knew the roof had fallen in and knocked us down."

The workmen were employed to day in roofing another stable, but happened to be passing the structure that was wrecked.

The accident occurred at the start of a sudden violent thunder storm in which lightning struck several places in Greater Boston.

A huge chunk of bricks and mortar was torn from the cornice of an 18-family apartment block in Spring street extension, near the Medford carbarn. The occupants fled.

Ambulances were rushed to the scene over the windswept roads by Revere and metropolitan police while workmen delved into the wreckage amid the driving rain and lightning to rescue their comrades.

For a long time it was feared that other workmen were buried.

All the injured were said to be carpenters.

None of the partly completed steel structures was affected.

The ruined stable was a large one, about 150 by 40 feet, and 18 feet high.

NEW SCANDAL BREWS AS ROOSEVELT OUSTS OFFICIAL

HE THREATENED TO EXPOSE ABUSES

By International News Service

Washington, June 15—A major administration scandal threatened to develop today as Ewing Y. Mitchell, one of the two assistant secretaries of commerce, was summarily removed from office after he had declined to resign at the request of President Roosevelt.

A formal announcement from the Department of Commerce said Mitchell's resignation had been requested because he failed to show aptitude for executive tasks.

Friends of Mitchell, a Springfield, Mo., man who has been active in Missouri politics for twenty years, charged that he had been ousted because he threatened to expose corruption and abuses within the department.

In announcing that Mitchell's services had been "terminated," the Department of Commerce declared the assistant secretary had asserted he had uncovered "serious derelictions in administration of several bureaus in the department."

DATA REQUESTED

Secretary of Commerce Roper, the statement added, had asked Mitchell to submit all the data in his possession to Attorney-General Cummins as speedily as possible.

The President, the statement added, referred Mitchell's charges to the Department of Justice with the request that they be thoroughly investigated and Mitchell was advised "that he will be furnished every opportunity by that department (justice) to amplify and substantiate his comments."

The discharged assistant secretary, International News learned, is preparing a broadcast to be issued next week, charging extravagance within the department and scandalous abuses, particularly in connection with the shipping board.

MITCHELL BITTER

He was bitter today when told of his removal.

"Well, I have been dismissed," he said. "I wouldn't resign, because I was doing my duty. I'll have more to say later."

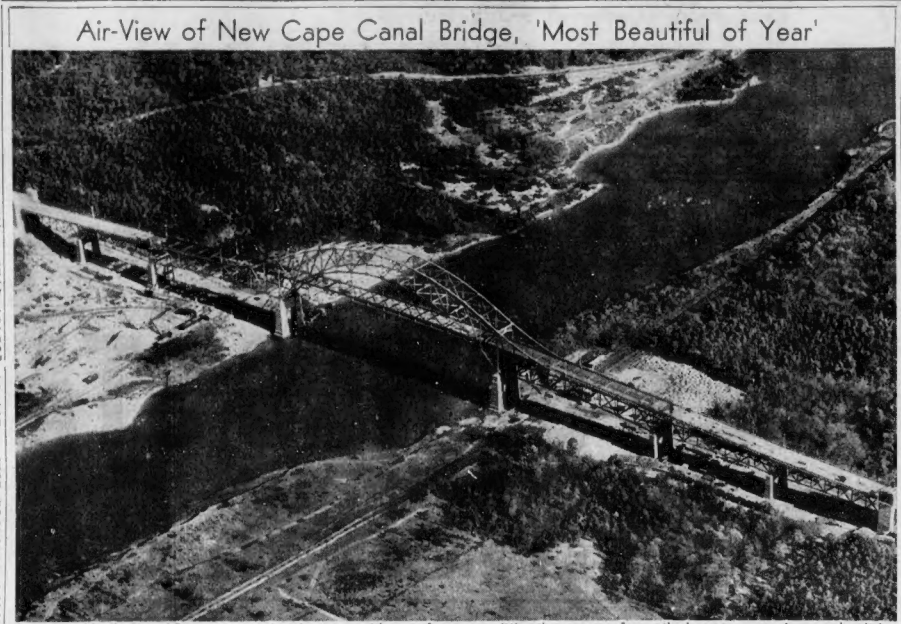
Department of Commerce officials, "off the record," ridiculed Mitchell's allegations and declared the department welcomed investigation. They said the statements attributed to him by friends represented merely the bitterness of a disgruntled official.

Only a few minutes after announcement of Mitchell's dismissal, President Roosevelt sent the name of his successor to the Senate for confirmation. He is John Monroe Johnson of Marion, S. C., a civil engineer, a Spanish-American and World War veteran, now colonel of engineers in the famous Rainbow Division in France.

Johnson previously had declined appointment as assistant secretary of war and as a regional public works administration advisor.

Air-View of New Cape Canal Bridge, 'Most Beautiful of Year'



Constructed by the United States army engineering corps, with part of a PWA allotment of $5,838,000, this bridge, arching the Cape Cod canal at Bourne, is the "most beautiful and artistic" structure of its type, completed within the past year, according to a national board of judges. The new span clears the water, at high tide, by 128 feet, permitting the passage of even the largest ocean-going vessels. It is to be opened to the public, June 22. The photograph, made from the air, shows graphically the symmetrical lines and pleasing architecture of modern science's most successful bid for combined beauty and utility.

kings, at least, money kings. It is very important to know one thing thoroughly. Mr. Tunney also knows Shakespeare.

For reasons that cause speculation, Max Baer did not win the fight, or hurt Mr. Braddock, his opponent. Some that believe in human nature said, "Do you think Baer could be cold-blooded enough to 'K. O.' Braddock, after seeing the photographs of Braddock's wife and three little kids, and all on the dole so recently?" That may explain it. Others think there was a more practical reason. The management said Baer had broken both hands in the fight, and that is why he patted Mr. Braddock instead of hitting him. But, the management would not exhibit X-rays of the broken hands, nor permit X-rays to be taken for reporters. So, perhaps it was the heart of Mr. Baer that broke, at the thought of putting back on the dole Mr. Braddock and his three little kiddies, one of them clasping a doll to her chest.

There will be another fight, with possibly greater gate receipts. The crop of ticket buyers never fails.

Jesse Jones, who understands business and has distributed much money for the government, says the public should understand the present condition of railroads and the necessity of strengthening them. Railroads must be helped to "meet increasing competition from highway and airway carriers, and their unprofitable mileage must be eliminated, if railroads are to continue in private hands."

The question is, can they continue in private hands?

Mr. Jones reminds the country that railroads "have provided greater employment, directly and indirectly, than any other industry," and their gross income has been cut in half.

A factory explosion in a small German village, destroying everything, killing many, is attributed by some to an overwhelmingly high-powered explosive hitherto unknown. That, if true, might interest Germany's neighbors.

The mayor of the village, writing for the Associated Press about the terrible destruction and death, concludes his story with "Heil Hitler." That might seem tactless, following such a disaster.

Bad news for California and points North, South, East and West. Helen Wills Moody was beaten yesterday, 6—0, 6—4, by Kay Stammers, British, tall and slim, "with a knee-high divided skirt, which looked like a pair of shorts." This will give Mrs. Helen Wills Moody something to work for.

Bruno Says He's Ignorant Of Kidnaping

By Associated Press

New York, June 15—Bruno Richard Hauptmann, awaiting appeal from his conviction for the murder of the Lindbergh baby, today stated through his spiritual advisor that he wished he knew more "about the horrible crime" so that he "could throw some light" on it.

The statement was given out by the Rev. D. G. Werner just before he left to visit Hauptmann in the Trenton death house, where he goes to see him once a week.

"I told Hauptmann," Mr. Werner's statement read, "that many honest Americans believe he had nothing to do with the crime of kidnaping the Lindbergh baby, but that he knew more than he says and perhaps wants to shield some one else."

Werner says that Hauptmann replied with tears:

"I wish I knew more than I do, so that I could say more than I am able to say as it is.

"Again and again I have told the same story. People believe I know more than I say.

"I wish I did and could throw some light on the horrible crime.

"I am myself the father of a little boy an dthe thought of somebody kidnaping him horrifies me. The same feeling I have when I think of the Lindbergh child."

Hauptmann's appeal will be heard in Trenton Thursday.

Mr. Werner reported Hauptmann never tired of listening to accounts of the activities of his small son and was easily moved to tears by the stories.

He said Hauptmann reads the Bible and books on religious subjects a great deal.

General Strike Plan in Toledo

By International News Service

Toledo, O., June 15—While a federal mediator moved vigorously to end Toledo's electrical power strike, a Central Labor Union committee of 23, representing 103 local unions in the city with a total membership of 40,000, this afternoon took the preliminary steps for calling a general strike.

After an hour-long session, the committee announced it had "unanimously agreed to take necessary steps to prepare for a general strike."

The committee serves in the capacity of a council and its recommendations are considered almost certain to be approved by the entire union group.

Observers here regarded the action of the committee more as a "lever" to force settlement of the present Toledo Edison workers' strike than any actual progress toward a general walkout.

OIL TRACED IN FIRE

Police Confident $50,000 Shore Gardens Blaze Was Set

A search for traces of oil in the ruins of the Shore Gardens at Nantasket began today as State Fire Marshal Stephen C. Garrity launched an investigation into the $50,000 fire.

So complete was the destruction of the unoccupied resort that inspectors found little evidence on which to work. At the outset of the fire firemen reported the odor of burning oil.

The fact that the flames broke out in the rear and front of the building at the same time indicated the use of a time device in starting the fire, Inspector Edward Murtaugh declared.

The explosion, which blew out the front of the building, injuring two Hull firemen, might have been hot air blasts, rather than a bomb, he added

Henry J. Stevens, commissioner of public safety in Hull, told today of extinguishing five separate fires in a small outbuilding located on the estate some distance from the main building.

He said they were not caused by embers from the big fire, but were obviously incendiary. He termed the blaze a "touch-off."

Alfred Stevens, son of the commissioner, and Peter Card, another Hull boy, said they saw two men flee in an auto just before the fire broke out.

In a preliminary report to the fire marshal today, Inspector Murtaugh said he was satisfied the fire was incendiary.

Nab Suspect at Gunpoint

Following a battle in the Jacob Lloon Drug store at 1300 Blue Hill avenue, Mattapan, early today, which he is alleged to have entered through a rear window, Frederick Fahey, 24, of West Selden street, Dorchester, was captured at gunpoint.

A pedestrian passing the drug store saw the man in the store and notified the police. A radio message was sent out from headquarters to a cruising car and Sergeant Charles Ridlon and Patrolman Timothy Sullivan and James Hanley rushed to the scene.

Confronted by police, Fahey, ignoring their guns, started a rough and tumble fight to escape arrest.

During the pitched battle chairs and tables were overturned, show cases were smashed and their contents strewn about.

Fahey finally was subdued. He was taken to police headquarters, where he was fingerprinted and photographed.

He was charged with breaking and entering in the nighttime and will appear in Dorchester Municipal Court today.

OMAHA STRIKE HALTS CARS

By Associated Press

Omaha, Neb., June 15—Sheriff John Hopkins today said the Omaha & Council Bluffs Street Car Company must stop night operation of its cars in riot-torn South Omaha, where one man was killed and more than 50 were injured last night in the third successive evening of violence.

"To run the cars is merely inviting riot and death," he said. "The only way to handle the situation is with the National Guard."

The sheriff announced that if the company did not voluntarily order the cars in after the rush hour during the evening, or the city council did not order it done, he would issue such an order.

If the company failed to comply, Hopkins said he would arrest the motormen.

N. H. Judge Hurls "Lie" At Auto Racket Charge

Branding as false charges that he was conducting a "hold-up racket," Judge David C. Chase of the Seabrook, N. H. court, said today he would fight ouster proceedings.

In an exclusive statement to the Boston Evening American, Judge Chase said:

"I have never taken a wrong dime in my life."

The charges were the result of a complaint made to New Hampshire authorities by Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin of Massachusetts.

As a consequence, Governor H. Styles Bridges demanded his resignation on the threat of having him "addressed" from the bench by the legislature for conduct "unbecoming the dignity of a judge."

The principal allegation was that Judge Chase was dividing the proceeds from fines with the police who brought the motorist to court.

The court, the charges said, was a tiny building, about 10 feet square, on the Judge's front lawn.

$2100 GEM SWINDLE

Dorchester Woman, 70, Buys Russian 'Royal' Jewels; Brooklyn Man Held

Swindling of a 70-year-old Dorchester woman with "fake" Russian imperial jewels was revealed by police today with the arrest of a Brooklyn men on a charge of larceny of $2100.

According to the police, Mrs. Lena Appel of Ashton street bought 13 diamonds from a man posing as a Russian sailor after an "appraisal" by a man posing as an expert.

She was walking on Blue Hill avenue when a stranger stopped her. He said he could speak only Russian — which she also could speak — and asked her assistance in disposing of a gold piece.

Another stranger stopped and examined the gold piece and bought it for $8. He asked the fake sailor if he had anything more to sell. The sailor replied:

"I've got 13 nice diamonds I brought from Russia."

"I've got a friend who is a diamond appraiser," said the other man. "Let's go and show these to him."

The "appraiser" put the value at $650 for each diamond. Mrs. Appel went to a downtown bank and drew out her entire account, $2100. She said the second man was to have taken part of the diamonds for $400, but at the last moment let her have them all.

ED TOOMEY IS DEAD

Veteran Boston American Employe Found Lifeless at Wheel of His Auto

Only two days ago, Ed Toomey, copy cutter in the Boston Evening American composing room, handled a story about two men who died while driving their machines.

Today a similar story goes to the "comp room," but somebody will handle it for Ed, because the story is about him.

Edward W. Toomey, genial, affable, industrious and a widely-known newspaperman and public official, was 66 years old and lived at 132 Huron avenue, Cambridge.

He was chairman of the Public Welfare Board and had endeared himself especially to the unfortunate inmates of the Home for Aged and Infirm in whose behalf he labored untiringly.

Last night he drove to West Roxbury to visit friends and was on his way home when stricken with a heart attack.

He was found by Patrolmen William Ward and James Carroll of the Brookline police and rushed to Peter Bent Brigham Hospital but was pronounced dead on arrival.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Margaret Perry Toomey, and two children, Edward, Jr., 19, and Everett.

The news of his death was given to the inmates of the Home for the Aged and Infirm by Rev. Stephan F. Moran at mass there.

The priest spoke highly of Mr. Toomey's services and Superintendent John P. Shea ordered the flag lowered to half-staff.

Mr. Toomey was the first president of St. Peter's Catholic Club of Cambridge.

He worked at his regular duties yesterday, receiving "copy" from the city room and routing it through the composing room, and appeared to be in the best of health.

He was connected with the Boston Evening American 30 years.

Siren Wife's Fate Rests on Jury

BARES SOUL TO AID HIS WIFE

Hotly Denies Plot To Murder, But Admits Love

Rockville, Md., June 15—A fantastic drama of illicit love life in a quiet little Maryland township moved toward a climax today as the case of Anne Lyddane was about to go to the jury.

The jury of farmers and village tradesmen was to decide whether the 29-year-old blonde wife of Francis Lyddane, a well-built, masculine figure in his thirties, was guilty of conspiring with Washington underworld characters to kill her husband because he carried $30,000 life insurance and because she loved another woman's husband.

A few minutes before midnight the anguished husband took the witness stand to defend the wife who is charged with plotting to have him murdered.

Having stuck loyally by her side throughout the trial, he was the last witness for the defense's contention that she was the victim of a blackmail plot on the part of Washington gangsters.

He underwent the ordeal of admitting that he knew she had been "running around" with another man; that he had ceased to live with her because of it but had now returned to her.

"Are you living as man and wife?" was asked by the prosecuting attorney.

"Yes."

Other Woman's Story

Prior to Lyddane's appearance on the stand, the crowded little courtroom had been electrified by the testimony of Mrs. Josephine Beall, middle-aged, spectacled wife of the "other" man for whose love the blond Anne Lyddane was alleged to have plotted murder.

Speaking quietly in a desperate effort to constrain pent-up emotions, the wife told how she had fought for several years to keep her husband from the accused woman.

She told of how she found her husband and Mrs. Lyddane in a car behind their home in Darnestown, Md., and how the latter had driven away "laughing in my face" when she interrupted them.

"It was June 12, 1932," she said. "I know because the next day my third baby was born."

Mrs. Lyddane in her testimony admitted intimacy with Arthur Beall, but she asserts that gangsters took advantage of knowledge of it to blackmail her.

Every eye was on the slim blonde as she took the witness stand smartly costumed in virginal white from head to foot.

"Do you know Arthur Beall?" her attorney, State Senator Stedman Prescott began.

"Yes, I do," she answered in a voice so low it could scarcely be heard by the 12 farmers sitting in the jury box.

Q—Was there a divorce action filed by his wife in which you were named? A—Yes, about two years ago. It was filed on one day and dismissed the next.

Q—Did there come a time after that suit was withdrawn when you began seeing Arthur Beall again? A—Yes, there was.

And in those replies, she said, lay the whole answer to the dire predicament in which she found herself on April 1 when she was arrested with John (Googy) Carnell, ex-convict and Rockville bartender, two of his former prison mates and a Washington gambler, accused of plotting with them to buy the murder of her husband and Mrs. Beall.

"All last November Googy bothered me about people who were going to expose certain things about me and Mr. Beall," she said. "Early in December a man phoned and said he had some pictures and wanted hush money for them. I told him I had no money and he said he would give me 20 minutes to raise it. I telephoned to my husband, but he was out, and when the man phoned back I promised him the money the next day.

Told Husband

"I had a little, but to make up the full amount I had to borrow $25 from the bank where I worked. When I went out at lunch time I took the money with me and down the street there were two men in a car with Ohio license tags. One of the men got out and stopped me. I paid the money.

"That night I told my husband I had paid the money and when he asked what for, I told him some one had telephoned and threatened to kidnap him.

"He said to me, 'Anne, I think I know what's troubling you and if you'd tell I think I could help you,'" she concluded.

"Why did you pay the money," her attorney demanded.

"I knew the divorce had been filed and was on record. After I began seeing Arthur again—well, I had been warned at the bank that if it began they couldn't keep me. I didn't want the publicity and I didn't want another divorce filed."

Q—Had you seen Arthur Beall at the hotel where Googy Carnell worked as a bartender? A—Yes, I had.

But on March 20, the date State's Attorney James Pugh says the murder bargain was pledged in her apartment, Mrs. Lyddane firmly denied having talked with either Carnell or John M. Boland, accused as the third hired accomplice.

She denied ever having seen Harry (Rags) Thomas, ex-convict who testified for the state that she had given him $200 last December as a down payment on Lyddane's murder.

Concerning a point which has been stressed by the state's witnesses, that Mrs Lyddane had $775 in her purse when she was arrested, a sum they maintained was prospective blood money, she testified it had been taken from the bank to invest in a baby bond.

There was a long moment of suspense when Attorney Prescott demanded loudly if she had ever planned at any time or with any person to kill her husband.

Turning her gaze first on the three judges and then full on the jury she stared at them before making a firm denial.

Lafayette BACK ON Bunker Hill

1825 COACH IN PARADE

The identical coach in which General Lafayette rode in 1825 to the dedication of Bunker Hill Monument will appear in the parade Monday commemorating the event.

The coach, now the property of Henry Ford, will be brought in from the Wayside Inn in Sudbury, attended by four guards in Continental uniform.

Joining in the holiday celebration will be the Boston Common Tercentenary committee and the Bunker Hill Day committee in Charlestown.

The exercises will begin at noon Monday on the Common with the assembly of troops.

With his party, all in Colonial costumes, he will enter a coach drawn by four horses, with coachman and footmen and four outriders as in 1825.

Mayor Mansfield will greet the "general" as did Mayor Quincy a century ago. The parade will then proceed down Park street to Tremont, to Bowdoin square.

The hardier marchers of the past century covered the entire distance to Bunker Hill afoot, but their descendants will take buses to Charlestown.

Heading the Common Tercentenary committee is former Mayor Andrew J. Peters, and Thomas H. Green is chairman of the municipal June 17 committee.

Clara Bow Becomes a 'Tax Refugee'

Copyright, 1935, by International News Service.

Hollywood, June 15—Filmland's threatened flight to escape the new California state income tax is under way.

Clara Bow, red-head of the screen, and her husband, Rex Bell, the cowboy star, are selling out all their local holdings and will become residents of Nevada.

Bell admitted today the new income tax bill, passed by the legislature and awaiting the governor's signature, was an important consideration in the move.

"Of course, Clara and I have been spending a good deal of time on our ranch, but now we plan to come to Hollywood only when picture work necessitates it," he said.

"In Nevada, we not only escape paying a state income tax, but all taxes are lighter."

The film couple are disposing of homes at Malibu Beach and in Beverly Hills and also a lot where they intended to build a palatial residence.

STIRRED BY DROWNING

Quincy Residents Demand Halt on Quarry Pits Deaths

Quincy residents were up in arms today demanding that the city fathers take action to halt the up-to-now unending procession of child deaths in the Granite quarries.

Protests followed the death of Margery Clarkin, 10, of Grass place, who yesterday sank beneath the murky waters of one of the pits.

A year ago the Quincy City Council was asked to appropriate $200 for fences about the quarry ledges, to stop children from attempting to swim in those places.

The City Council declined to make the appropriation.

The pits in Quincy are perhaps the most dangerous spots for swimming in Massachusetts, yet for years children of the city have governed their aquatic ability by the heighth of their dives from ledges that surround them some of them 125 feet above the water.

Gen. Johnson In Car Crash

Sioux City, June 15 — General Hugh S. Johnson and Miss Frances Robinson, his secretary, escaped with a shaking up here today when the car in which they were riding crashed into another and careened over the curb into a house.

New Textile Strike Looms

Providence, June 15—A nation-wide strike of woolen and worsted workers was threatened today by President Thomas F. McMahon of the United Textile Workers of America.

McMahon said a strike date would be set in 10 days if the manufacturers do not reply with 30 days to demands for a 20 per cent wage increase.

His statement followed a meeting of union officials which had been called, according to the union chiefs, as a result of reports that the end of the NRA would bring a general wage cut.

McMahon said 110,000 workmen and women would be affected if a strike is called.

The demand for an increase is already in the hands of President Arthur Besse of the National Association of Woolen Manufacturers.

At the meeting here, besides Mc Mahon, were Vice-Presidents Horre A. Rivere and Joseph R. White, Secretary-Treasurer Anthony Valente and William J. Dunlap, president of the woolen and worsted branch of the textile union.

This group had been authorized by the executive board to handle the wage question.

Mill to Evict N. H. Strikers

By Associated Press

East Rochester, N. H., June 15—Eviction notices were served on workers occupying company-owned homes and former mill employes were dropped from ERA work relief projects today in the wake of the Cocheco Mills' closing yesterday.

Fulton Rindge, treasurer of the mills, said that 15 to 20 families, whose members had not reported for work after the mill reopened Monday, were served.

He said they were two three months in arrears on paymenis.

Workers who disregarded the strike notice issued by the United Textile Workers of America local will not be served, Rindge declared.

At the same time, Mayor Sumner W. Watson announced former mill employes would be dropped from all ERA projects.

He said that the employes had failed to take advantage of an opportunity to work.

The mill's closing yesterday was the second within a month as the result of labor disputes.

MAINE FATHER SLAIN BY AXE, WIFE HELD

West Falmouth, Me., June 15 — Tee-year-old Jimmy Morrill today led searchers to the body of his slain father and led to the arrest of his mother, charged with axe-murder.

The body of the father, Herbert L. Morrill, 63, bicycle dealer and Spanish War veteran, was found in the cellar of his home, wrapped in a blanket and partially buried under freshly turned earth.

After questioning of the boy, County Attorney Walter M. Tapley, Jr., ordered his mother, Mrs. Mary Morrill, 53, locked up in Cumberland County jail, charged with the killing.

For six days the little boy lived in the house with the horrible secret locked in his heart, Tapley said.

According to Tapley the boy said:

"Sunday I went down cellar to bring up some beer. I saw a mound of sand and I brushed some away. My father was lying there dead, his head all cut.

"I went upstairs and my mother was washing the axe. She told me to keep quiet."

The boy said nothing until today when he wandered into the fields, while searchers were hunting the missing man.

Deputy Sheriff George R. Bryson said to the boy:

"Come on, sonny, don't you know where your father went?"

The boy replied:

"He's down cellar."

Bryson took the boy in his arms, ran to the house and made the gruesome discovery.

Mrs. Morrill, who was doing housework, was questioned but denied the crime.

When confronted with the boy's story, the authorities said she replied:

"Did he say that?"

The axe was found in the house.

Authorities said they had learned that six gallons of beer had been drunk in the house since late last week.

(Morrill's disappearance was unreported until yesterday. His daughter, by his first wife, Mrs. Guy Hamilton of West Randolph, and her husband, came to West Falmouth and then with Mrs. Morrill went to Portland to report Morrill missing.

When originally questioned, Mrs. Morrill is said to have declared that there was no trouble between her and her husband.

"He and I and the boy played cards Saturday night," she said.

Examination of the dead man's skull showed nearly a dozen deep cuts. The body was covered with a piece of burlap, pieces of wood and several old bicycle tires.

CHINA DEMANDS U. S., BRITAIN SAVE HER

By Associated Press.

London, June 15—China's "last hope"—an appeal to the western powers for help—created deep concern today as Japan was reported massing troops along the Great Wall for an advance on Peiping.

The Chinese ambassador, Quo Tai-Chi, visited the foreign office to discuss the crisis and diplomats said he asserted Japan's penetration of North China was a "flagrant" violation of the nine-power Washington treaty of 1922.

In the face of this charge, a proclamation of the policy of the new foreign secretary, Sir Samuel Hoare, was awaited anxiously.

While no official comment was immediately forthcoming, it was understood Great Britain would maintain her attitud of "watchful waiting," at least pending an exchange of views with other signatories of the nine-power pact, including the United States.

U. S. SIGNED TREATY

Diplomatic quarters interpreted Ambassador Quo's call as a forerunner of urgent representations by China to all Western signatories of the treaty, seeking guarantees of China's sovereignty and administrative integrity, and reaffirmation of the "open door" principle.

The Times pointed out that under the terms of the pact, the United States, Belgium, Great Britain, China, France, Italy, Japan, The Netherlands and Portugal agreed to "respect the sovereignty, independence, territorial and administrative integrity of China."

The newspaper asserted the Chinese government was complaining that "recent action of Japanese military authorities is a breach of the treaty."

LIVES PLEDGED TO CHINA

The Socialistolist Express, which seizes every opportunity to hammer home its policy of not interfering with foreign affairs, was the lone morning newspaper to comment editorially. It said:

"You should take a live interest in what Japan is doing.

"British lives are pledged by the nine-power treaty to defend the territorial integrity of China.

"They were pledged by the treaty of 1839 to defend the territorial integrity of Belgium. Belgium called on us as an impiement of that bond in 1914.

Japan Pours Armies Into Chinese Cities

By Associated Press

Tientsin, China, June 15—Japan poured more troops into Tientsin and Peiping and massed forces near Shanhaikwan today as two series of demands confronted Chinese authorities.

Fresh representations were made to Chinese authorities as a result of the detention at Changpei Wednesday of four Japanese.

General Ho Ying-Chin, Chinese minister of war, went to Nanking and plunged immediately into conferences with government leaders concerning the original demands for elimination of anti-Japanese elements in Hopei province.

Japan's newly arrived troops took stations in the Tientsin and Peiping garrisons, ostensibly as replacements, while foreign sources confirmed reports that nearly 5000 soldiers were concentrating at Shanhaikwan, on the sea end of China's Great Wall.

TWA'S Explanation of Plane Accident

Kansas City, Mo., June 14, 1935.

William R. Hearst,
San Simeon, Calif.
Dear Mr. Hearst:

THE following release has been made by myself concerning the findings reported by the Department of Commerce this morning in connection with the recent accident to our airplane at Macon, Missouri:

"Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., officials were amazed at the reported findings of the accident board of the Bureau of Air Commerce as to the cause of the airplane accident on May 6, 1933, near Atlants, Missouri.

"The evidence at the public hearings of the Bureau of Air Commerce clearly showed that TWA was in no wise at fault in the handling of this flight and that the accident occurred because of no failure of equipment or company personnel.

"These facts were clearly established before the accident board by the employes of the airline and independently proven by records kept by the United States Weather Bureau, reports made by the Bureau of Air Commerce observers at Kirksville and Kansas City by the log of the plane itself and the testimony of many disinterested witnesses who testified at Macon and Kansas City.

"These hearings definitely established the fact that the real cause of the accident was that Pilot Bolton when he neared the field at Kirksville attempted to come down through the ceiling reported by Bureau of Air Commerce observers at Kirksville as seven thousand feet with four miles visibility and lower scattered clouds at twelve hundred feet.

"What he actually found was practically a zero condition which in the parlance of air transportation means a total lack of ceiling and visibility.

"The plane in question was not sent on to Kirksville until the company had telephoned the Bureau of Air Commerce observer on duty at the Kirksville field and had the observer confirm his previous report of good weather conditions.

"Had weather conditions been as reported, the pilot of the plane would have found a safe landing at the Kirksville Field.

"The accident occurred not because of any failure on the part of the Transcontinental and Western Air or its employes, nor because of the failure of any of the very latest and best scientific instruments with which the plane was equipped, but solely because the favorable landing condition reported by the observer at the Kirksville Field did not exist.

"TWA plans to co-operate fully with the senatorial committee of investigation in the hope that the condition which cause or permitted this plane to meet with an accident may be entirely corrected in the interest of increased safety for air navigation."

JACK FRYE,
President Transcontinental & Eastern Air, Inc.

By Associated PrPress

The body, taken from the East river in the Bronx, roughly ten miles from where he was last seen, was viewed in the Fordham Hospital morgue by the father. He collapsed after making the identification.

JACKIE KAUL

Recovery of the body ended a police search that has progressed on two theories since the child's disappearance. One theory, believed by his mother, was that he had fallen into the river.

Police also thought he might have been seized by a woman of frustrated maternal instincts.

The point of recovery was north of the neighborhood where he was seen.

Examination by an assistant medical examiner showed death was by drowning.

CONGRESS PUT TO WORK ON SATURDAYS

Washington, June 15—Work to clear the Roosevelt program of its many burdens went into overtime today as both Houses of Congress met in an unusual Saturday session.

New Deal chiefs called the extra session after the "stop-gap" NRA bill was signed by the President, giving the Blue Eagle nine and one-half months more to live but without code powers.

Hostility to the President's far-reaching social security bill began in the Senate as Senators Harrison (D) of Mississippi and Wagner (D) of New York fired the opening guns for its passage.

Senators Huey Long (D) of Louisiana served notice he would offer his "share the wealth" plan as an amendment to supplant all of the money raising provisions in the bill.

His amendment calls for a tax of 1 per cent on fortunes of $1,700,000 graduated up to 100 per cent on all above six million dollars. The Senate will reject Long's amendment, but it will furnish the first test of sentiment in that body on his revolutionary plan.

The administration bill, which has been passed in substantially the same form by the House, was claimed to be actuarily sound by Senator Harrison, finance committee chairman. He said:

"It deals with matters which other countries have already dealt with and from whose experience we can be guided.

"It will not commence with unwise speed but rather will be a gradual development, proceeding carefully and surely for the goal which is now far distant."

Constitutionality of the measure was defended by Wagner with the observation:

"Congress has provided for the destitute, for Mississippi river flood sufferers, and for eradication of the Mediterranean fruit fly. Is it not at least as important to provide for the security of persons when they reach old age?"

Sioux City, Ia., June 15 (US)—A resounding call for farmers to arm and fight the forces which destroyed the NRA and are planning to wreck the triple-A program was voiced by General Hugh S. Johnson at the "Land of Smiles" jubilee here. He shouted:

"If I were a farmer, I'd get my buddies together and keep an eye on the chambers of commerce in agricultural communities. The motto of the members of most of them is 'you scratch my back and I'll scratch yours.' That leaves the farmer to scratch his own back against a fence post."

Johnson disposed of the United States Supreme Court decision ruling the NRA void with the simple declaration:

WORKING WIVES HATE RULE OF SOVIET

ARTICLE TWO

By MARIE SMITH

True, there are women in the Soviet Union who like well. But they are not wives of workers or working-women. They are the wives of Communist leaders, of G. P. U. officials. They are the women of writers and artists who sell themselves to serve the Stalin propaganda machine.

In the three years of my life in Russia, I did not find a single working-woman who was not bitter against the Stalin dictatorship.

The average Soviet working-woman lives for her job at seven in the morning. She returns completely exhausted at nine or ten in the evening.

For at the end of her day she is often compelled to join a "subotnik"—a voluntary labor contribution. Then she has to stand in line for her food until midnight. Many then go out in search of men. Those who have no husbands never earn enough by their honest toil to keep alive.

WORSE THAN STABLE

When a working-woman falls sick from hard labor or hunger, she is taken to a hospital which is worse than an American stable. The Stalin propaganda machine has advertised throughout the world the glorious hospitalization system of the Soviet Union.

It is true, there are a few model hospitals, reserved for commissars and their wives and children. But the millions of common people have no hospitals worthy of the name.

I know the Russian hospitals well, because my health broke down as a result of having to witness from day to day the tragedy of a whole nation. Only last year I was taken to the first clinic at Devichye Polye, outside of Moscow.

I saw how the common patients are treated there. They receive no food. The beds are hard. The wards are filled with filth and vermin.

ALL RIGHTS GONE

After being operated upon, workers—whether men or women, are thrown about like blocks of meat. When people die in bed, the linen is not changed. The same is true when patients are discharged.

I begged my husband to take me back home as quickly as possible, as I was afraid that I would perish in that so-called clinic.

This is the inside view of the glorious emancipation of the Russian women advertised abroad so much. All the rights and privileges which women have won in civilized countries during the past century have been completely swept aside by the Stalin regime.

As a working-woman myself, as one who has battled in America for Socialism for 20 years, I was staggered to discover that millions of women in Russia are doing hard work in mines, in railroad freight terminals, and in the northern forests cutting timber.

WHY MRS. STALIN DIED

Stalin's own wife, the daughter of a working-man, could not stand the degradation of the women in her own land. She took poison and died rather than bear the shocking conditions.

Stalin's wife saw that it was her husband who had let loose the famine in the Ukraine, in the Northern Caucasus, on the Volga, from which millions of people perished.

It was Stalin who was responsible for the exile of millions of peasants to Siberia, to the Arctic regions, and to Central Asia, wrecking millions of homes.

There are untold numbers of women in Russia today who do not know where their husbands, seized by the G. P. U., are, and whether they are alive or dead.

CROP OF WAIFS

The Stalin policy raised a new crop of homeless children, of street waifs orphaned by the terror and the hunger which followed in its wake.

Stalin's wife committed suicide as a protest against the horrors which were engulfing her people.

It is three months now since we left the Soviet Union. But I still live in the shadow of the terrible agony of the Russian people under the Stalin regime.

The New Washington

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

The dream of Pierre Charles L'Enfant, the great French military engineer who laid out Washington, comes a step nearer realization as the Supreme Court moves into its magnificent new $12,000,000 building of white marble and granite and aluminum.

Edwin C. Hill

Since Congress voted $200,000,000 in 1926 for widening over the Capitol, there has been a sharp conflict between the opposed advocates of art and utility.

But in spite of that, organic unity is being achieved, essentially in keeping with the L'Enfant plan and with George Washington's hope that the Capitol would reflect, from decade to decade, "the evolutionary growth of the nation."

OLD PLACES GO

New America rises here in the framework of national tradition, but a lot of old America passes. Pennsylvania avenue, which fizzled out as a noble boulevard of empire, becoming a street of hamburgers and honka-tonks, is transformed with nearly $100,000,000 worth of white marble and chromium, and its old aura passes with its ramshackle buildings.

"Shoo's" place is gone. That was Shoemakers, where the gin rickey came into being.

For fifty years customers always drank near the door, with the possibility that the ceiling might fall in any minute—like New Dealers fearing a Supreme Court decision.

WHERE POE LIVED

And only on a map, by careful checking of records, could I locate that dingy little room where Poe lived precariously while he made the rounds of government offices, pleading for a clerkship which would keep him alive while he wrote his poetry. Or the house of James McNeil Whistler, or the birthplace of Henry Watterson.

Jefferson had to walk a footbridge across Tiber creek in Pennsylvania avenue, when he was inaugurated.

Andrew Jackson's bucolic whiskey-drinking, riotous constituents tracked the thick mud of the avenue over the White House carpets and planted their muddy boots on needlework chairs as they toasted the new President in raw red-eye.

L'Enfant, quarreling with those who would pervert or limit his plan, quit the job before much had been accomplished. But he had projected something stately and beautiful, and after 150 years it comes to fulfillment.

Walt Whitman liked the aimless hodge-podge of the avenue, and he seemed, too, to like its beginning and ending in nothing very definite.

For the lusty, bewhiskered poet of the "Democracy of the States," dreams lay at either end of that frowsy street, and poets know the danger of crowding a dream.

Let it come true as it may, is their idea. Wait, holding down his meagre little government job, knew everybody up and down the street, strolling, arguing, chanting his endless recitative of the glory which was to be America. And sometimes he was prophetic:

Long, too long, O land,
Traveling roads all even and peaceful, you learn from joys and prosperity only!
But now, ah, now, to learn from crises of anguish—advancing, grappling with direst fate and recoiling not.

The great new triangle of government buildings with its base in Fifteenth street and its side in Constitution and Pennsylvania avenues, has banished the gasoline stations, beauty parlors, palmists and hot dog stands, rounding out L'Enfant's noble theme, to be scored in marble and bronze.

But it is being achieved with a conflict between the adherents of historic and symbolic integrity and those of objective, architectural values.

Dr. Leicester B. Holland, chief of the Fine Arts Division of the Library of Congress, opposes the plan. He cherishes historic values.

The Supreme Court, in today's dark swirl of contending forces, is our first and most deeply venerated symbol of order and stability, and its stately new building is a fitting concern for the nation.

SIX THEFT PLOT BOYS HELD

Providence, June 15—An elaborately planned career of holdups and crime was believed frustrated here today when detectives arrested six youths, none of them more than 17 years of age.

Police said the boys admitted planning a series of holdups in this city and southern Massachusetts towns, the first of which was to have been staged tonight.

Several breaks had already provided them with guns and burglar tools, police said. The boys were reported to have lined up three autos to steal for their operations.

Under arrest were John Gallagher, 17, Francis Wentworth, 17, and four boys of juvenile age.

They were charged with breaking and entering, and larceny, and will be arraigned tomorrow in a special Sunday session of district court.

150 Years Life Span Visioned

By Associated Press

Moscow, June 15 — Prof. Peter Lasareff, member of the Soviet Academy of Science, declared today that the normal life span of human beings should be something over 150 years and revealed that he had succeeded in prolonging the lives of daphnia (minute fresh water crustaceans) to four times the usual existence by the use of roentgen rays.

He will shortly head an expedition to the Georgian Soviet Republic, in an effort to discover the causes of the longevity of the inhabitants there, many of whom are reported to have lived a century and a half.

ELKS' SPEAKER HITS 'TINKERS'

Attempts to "tinker" with the Constitution were assailed by Arthur M. Sullivan, Suffolk County register of probate, at Flag Day exercises of the Boston Lodge of Elks on the Common.

He said:

"In these days of radicalism and Communism, if the door were opened, who knows what pernicious doctrines and sinister principles might creep into the sacred folds of that cherished instrument upon which our government was founded?

"We know quite well our rights under it as it now exists but we know not what they might be if it were tampered with in these trying times.

"Such tinkering would result in attempts to change the Constitution of every state in the Union."

Catherine Blake Weds in Old South Church

By BETTY ALDEN

"SOMETHING O'D, SOMETHING NEW, something borrowed and something blue" . . . Every bride complies with this ancient mandate in her efforts to leave no stone unturned to assure herself of a happy marriage . . .

The wedding gown worn by Catherine Blake at her marriage this afternoon satisfied two of these stipulations in that it was borrowed from her mother-in-law, Mrs. Bertram Currier, and her veil was of 18th Century heirloom lace and silk net.

CATHERINE BLAKE

"Something blue" was a blue marker in her tiny ivory prayer book, which didn't show because of her bouquet of white roses and orchids . . . and shiny white satin slippers for "something new" . . .

Sister Maid of Honor

CATHERINE (whom, we have just discovered after writing about her for several busy years since her debut, is really Maria Catherine), bestowed her heart and hand upon Charles Bertram Currier with her godfather, Charles B. Blanchard giving her away, and the Rev. Russell Henry Stafford officiating.

Relatives and friends of the William Osborne Blakes and of Mrs. Currier packed the Gordon Chapel of the Old South Church for the ceremony . . .

Peggy Blake was maid of honor . . . frocked in turquoise blue organza with a cartwheel hat of white straw, she carried an arm bouquet of spring flowers . . .

The bridesmaids' dresses were fashioned in similar style, with a tailored shirtwaist bodice, and long full skirts, of peach organza and their hats were also white straw, with peach bands . . .

Reception Follows Ceremony

Stephen Cochran Currier was the best man and serving as ushers were the Messrs. Richard C. Scott of Los Angeles, Howard C. Ulfelder, Samuel S. Renius, Philip Lord, Frank Raymond Stubbs, and Robert C. Currier, all of Boston . . .

After September 30, the bride, a member of the Junior League, and her new husband, Harvard 1932, will be at home in Cambridge . . .

Marjorie Sachs Is Bride

MARJORIE SACHS, one of the queens of New England tennis courts, was married today at a small garden wedding at the home of her parents, Professor and Mrs. Paul J. Sachs of Cambridge . . .

In the presence of relatives and a few close friends, including many tennis stars who have played both with and against the bride in important matches, she became the bride of Carl E. Pickhardt, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Pickhardt of West Newton . . .

The bride's gown was of white satin with a lace tunic and a long tulle and lace veil . . . Eight bridesmaids in flowing chiffon gowns of lemon yellow, bare headed, and carrying huge bouquets of lavender sweet peas, added to the artistic effect of the garden setting for the ceremony . . . the maid of honor wore a lavender frock with yellow sweet peas . . .

Mr. Pickhardt has just been awarded a fellowship from Harvard University, so he and his bride are taking advantage of this good fortune to combine their honeymoon with studying drawing and painting in Europe . . .

Marian Clark Walks to Altar

THE USUAL PEACE and quiet of Beverly Farms was disturbed at noon today by the excitement incident to a large society wedding in St. John's Church . . . The observer of these doings saw, first, the construction of the striped canopy over the entrance to the church, then the arrival of florists with clusters of white flowers and green ferns for decorations at the altar . . .

Every detail of their grooming perfect, the ushers and best man, reached the church in time to greet the first arriving guests . . . Shiny cars transporting smartly clad citizens of both New York and Boston drove up to the canopy in a steady stream until the arrival of the bridesmaids, attired in frilly summer frocks, was the signal that the hour set for the ceremony had struck . . .

The arrival of the bride, Marian Clark, with her father, Henry Cannon Clark of Pride's Crossing, at her side, created a stir among the pedestrians, who watched sentimentally while the fluff of tulle and satin which was the bride, alighted from her limousine and hurried out of sight under the canopy . . .

Ushers at this wedding, at which Marian became the bride of Winthrop S. Emmett of Stony Brook, Long Island, were the Messrs. James Weekes, Robert Brown, 3rd, George S. Greene, all of New York; Caarles Stockton of Boston, Huntington Thom of Washington, D. C., James W. Paul of Radnor, Pa., L. Bancel LaFarge of Mt Carmel, Ct.; Francis Richardson of Charles River . . .

The Rev. Endicott Peabody of Groton School, assisted by the Rev. Bradford H. Burnham of Beverly Farms, performed the solemn ceremony . . .

Beauty on Short Notice

Youthifying Cream Whisks Away Signs of Age in 15-Minutes' Time

By THE BEAUTY EDITOR

EVERY MONTH or so in these columns we announce the discovery of some glorious new bang-up beauty aid designed to turn leathery, wrinkled or blemished skins into glowing, translucent ones.

Our great weakness is that we keep falling in love with these new challengers—pledging them eternal devotion and never expecting anything to surpass them in accomplishment again.

But that is where we are wrong. It may be due in part to the inevitability of hot, sultry days to come—and the way we have of skipping our regular beauty treatments.

The most we can do when the mercury registers 100 Fahrenheit is to turn the electric fan up another notch, clutch a frosted glass of mint julep and forget all about it—faces, taxes, flirtations and all.

Not that we should, mind you, but in July, especially at the beach or in the country, beauty salons and cosmetic counters are not near at hand, and we are apt to get slovenly and lazy.

That is why we are particularly smitten with a new cream that actually takes the place of all the beauty treatments we have ever heard of. We say now, and we repeat in a louder voice, that this cream is like nothing you or I have ever met up with before.

It isn't at all nice looking or pleasant to use, but if it was actually made of perfumed skies and things that grow in the moonlight, we wouldn't know, anyway. All that we are sure about is that it lifts your face to the pinacle of perfection in exactly 15-minute time.

You smooth this cream over your entire face and neck and leave it on to dry. While it is in the first process of drying, place your fingers to your temples to give your face a "lift." This lifts up the muscles and tissues and when the cream dries, you will find that your face has been actually "lifted," too.

The big moment comes when you wash the cream off with tepid water and look at yourself in the glass. If you've forgotten how a skin can really glow after a purging of its unseen grime, or the brisk stimulation of a five-dollar-facial, the thrill will be recaptured for you.

It is the only cream of its kind we know of that was created for all types of skin. Don't ask us how it works—(we admit we don't know)—but it nourishes a dry, lined skin and normalizes an oily one. It literally refines pores in two applications, reduces puffiness under the eyes, whips up fresh color and lifts your whole face right out of the dumps.

To learn the name of this sensational cream that gives a debutante bloom to dated or tired complexions, call Juliet Shelby, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Beauty Answers

Question—Some months ago you mentioned a sun oil which Delores del Rio used to protect her golden-bronze skin while sunbathing. You said that the oil was a very, inexpensive unscented one, but that if you preferred to use it scented, you merely applied a few drops of your favorite perfume. I have lost the clipping, but would appreciate very much knowing the name of this oil. Also the price?

MAY W., Arlington.

Answer—No wonder you are interested in learning the name of this oil. It is one that many Hollywood stars use for body massage as well as sun-baths. Miss Del Rio has found it very satisfactory and lavishly smears her body before each sun-bath. It can also be applied to the body before a hot bath, two or three times a week and keeps the skin satiny-smooth and lovely. Trade names cannot be mentioned here, so please write to me again this time enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Servants Take Sides

CHAPTER 44

Amah, blubbering noisily, hurried away to her mistress and set up a loud wailing, telling Still-Water what the wife of the first son had done to her. "Insulting you through me!" wailed amah.

Then Still-Water went to see the first son's wife, and they berated each other. Anger ebbed and flowed through the courts. Ai yah, it was a fine drama. The servants of the household took sides, some with the first son's wife some with the third son's wife.

Even into the garden where Ho sat talking to Stephen, word of the quarrel was carried. The servant who brought tea told the master, speaking in such wise that the white man did not grasp the meaning.

Stephen, looking at his friend immobile of countenance, wondered if the way of life of the East did not offer more serenity than that of the West—this quiet garden, the sheltered courts beyond.

Two Angry Women

Ho, who had not been at all certain that education among the women was a good thing, decided now that it was not, and sent formal summons that evening to this third son to come to his apartment, telling him it was better that the women change their ways.

The next morning word was brought that his third son's wife was very ill, having put forth great fire.

It was wise not to oppose her, for there was hope that she was soon to have a son. Then Ho decided he would go away for a little meditation, and leave the affair to settle itself.

Had the matriarch, Ho's mother been alive, she would have governed them by doing as her favorite wished, but the wife of Ho could never decide between her three sons.

Now the ten-year-old daughter of the dead second son who had long wished to study with the boys of the household and had been refused, came and stood up bravely between the two angry women, making herself a go-between.

"If I, this little insignificant one, lowest in the families of the sons of Ho, should be sent with the third son's wife, the honor of learning would be shared with the second son's widow, my mother. Then neither the wife of the youngest, or the oldest son triumphs to the full."

Rage Dies Out

"It is a good compromise," said some one.

"It is a good compromise," said every one.

Then all at once the rage between the two women had spent itself.

"It is now the hour to go," said the little girl, pressing her advantage; and, after smoothing the hair of Still-Water and putting rice powder on her face, she led her forth.

"They come, they come," announced Kin.

Hester saw entering the room not one but two young girls, holding hands as if to give courage, each to the other.

Their tiny feet struck the floor with the clump, clump of padded sticks raised and lowered, raised and lowered. They sat side by side on two straight chairs Kin placed for them their amah attending them, standing behind.

"At last!" Hester said to herself. After four years in this country am I to know its women?"

The older girl's face did not interest her. It was heavy and expressionless. She did not know that it was dulled by the fierce part the girl had played in the recent happenings of Ho's household. The younger girl was fascinating.

The child sat squarely on her chair, a humorous likeness in her attitude to that of Ho himself. Behind her composure, Hester was aware of magnetic power and a strong will. This girl must play a big part in the Ho household, may be the favorite child.

Little Favorite

"What is your name?" Hester asked.

"Shiao Pao, Little Precious."

Ah, she was right; the little girl was a favorite.

Now Hester began the lesson, leading the girls about the room, to chair and table and window, telling them the foreign words.

The news spread through the hong that women from the household of Ho were in the house. The word reached Stephen, Two? He had arranged for only one, the wife of the third son. Who was the other?

Filled with curiosity to know what the women of Ho's household were like, he went up the stairs, passed by the open door, hoping to catch a glimpse of them.

Standing in the dark hall, he could see and not be seen. They were facing him.

Why, one was the girl he had seen kneeling in the street, the little girl with the black hair waving about her face, like a child of his own race.

That strangely appealing figure had been on pilgrimage from the Ho household! How little after all he understood Ho's life!

Note EXPLAINS UNAVOIDABLE Absence

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckmen:

My husband and I have already accepted a formal wedding invitation. The wedding takes place in ten days, and there is a possibility that a day or so before the wedding that conditions will develop that will prevent my going to the wedding.

As it takes place in a nearby town where my husband will be at the time, would it be bad form if he were to attend without me, or should he stay away also? I have never met the bride, but know her father, and my husband is acquainted with both.

Should I write a note the last minute if we cannot go, or in the event that he gone, should he explain my absence, or should he remain quiet and should I drop a personal note to whom, father or prospective bride?

We are sending a gift of course, and as it is a "big" wedding, I shall never be missed in the gathering, but just what should I do? C.

It would be quite correct for your husband to attend the wedding alone if you are not, at the last minute, able to go.

If he attends the reception, he will have an opportunity to explain that you were not able to come; if he attends only the ceremony, there will, of course, probably not be an opportunity for him to explain.

You may either send a telegram when you find out that it will be impossible for you to attend the wedding, or you may write a note, if there is time for a note to reach the hosts before the wedding, or you may write a note afterward explaining your inability to come.

ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX and NELL BRINKLEY

Both Men And Women Yearn for Popularity

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

HAS the coming of warm weather anything to do with the universal urge to be popular?

In looking over the morning's mail, I find that the largest number of letters ask the question: "How can I be popular?"

They are not all from girls, either; a number of young men, and some not so young, write they would like to be popular, too. Married ladies who think that their lives are pretty drab would also like a little more applause to come their way.

The questions, therefore, naturally arise: How does popularity happen? Is it wholly a gift of nature? Is one born that way? If not, how does one acquire it?

One girl, who signs her letter "Kitty," goes so far as to say: "I'd rather be popular than beautiful, rich and good, or to marry happily, or succeed with my job because I believe popularity would include these things. But I'm not popular. Perhaps I try too hard, or, as my mother tells me, I'm too selfish; I'm too popular with myself to be popular with other people."

VITALITY ATTRACTIVE

I think this young lady's mother has hit the nail on the head. The selfish person or the languid, sleepy individual is never as popular as the boy or girl who is full of life. For everyone finds vitality attractive and responds to it.

Warm-heartedness counts greatly.

We love people who do not concentrate on themselves, who have a lively sympathy for others. Beauty and charm and personal grace are not to be overlooked, but in these days of synthetic loveliness, they're not as important as they were before the advent of the beauty parlor. For, today, anyone who is well-groomed, who understands how to make the best of whatever attractiveness she may possess and who knows what is becoming in the way of clothes may look well in spite of the fact that she is downright homely.

REFRESHINGLY PLAIN

There is something chic about a homely girl who knows how to dress the part. She's a sort of human olive, refreshing after the too-ben lovelinesses of the more conventional types of blondes and brunettes.

Another great asset to popularity is the ability to do things. The girl who insists on sitting in a corner and watching opportunity pass her by can never compete in popularity with a girl who does things well. Take the girl who can play the piano for an informal dance—and, thank goodness! in spite of all the mechanical contrivances to the contrary, some girls can play good dance music. Or, take the girl who is a wizard with a chafing dish and can turn out an impromptu supper with perfect ease. Girls who still know how to cook are in the front ranks of the popular ones.

GOOD ORGANIZER

Consider the girl who can get up a dramatic club, enlist her friends to put on plays and act in them. She's popular not only on her account but because she has discovered ways and means of making her friends popular.

Take the girl who can dance well—she's a joy in any community. Or her specialty may run to games—bridge, tennis or golf. The more things she can do, the better.

Instead of being satisfied with the things you can do, you can always, by working hard, learn how to do more things. And while you're about it, learn to do them well. For instance, you can't learn to cook well overnight, but you can learn to cook well by joining a class.

And, my dear young correspondents, if you really learn how to cook well, you can't escape the tag of being universally popular.

WANTS HER PICTURES BACK

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We went together "steady" for over a year. I'm 19 and he's 20. He left town, and I've been corresponding with him ever since. Now, we've had a misunderstanding, and he didn't answer my letter. In a case like this, would it be proper to ask him for the return of my pictures and letters, or wait? DISAPPOINTED.

People do not demand the return of letters as they used to in grandma's day, and it's the same with pictures. If you make up, it's a distinct anti-climax to hand out another picture and write more love-letters.

Among modern young people, there's a disposition to take for granted that boys and girls are sufficiently well-bred and honorable not to show these things about, which would be common to the last degree.

When the break is definite, and a boy or girl marries someone else, those souvenirs of former affairs are burned. Bonfire night is becoming quite usual among young people.

Education Begins

EDUCATION begins, now for the engaging little Dionne girls, with their huge eyes that long since began to take in the pictures of the world around them before they knew it had any meaning.

Now the meaning is beginning to be made known. Education starts for them, and other little babies not so famous, but very marvelous to their young parents, at what is to be an old gentleman or lady a ridiculously small time in the world.

"This little pig went to market;
This little pig stayed home;
This little pig had roast beef;
This little pig had none;
This little pig cried 'Wee! Wee!'
All the way home!"

One, two, three, four, five little toes. She doesn't know it is FIVE little toes she has yet, but she knows now that they go one at a time, that there is a sing-song about it, that the last toe is called WEE-WEE, and that it is something to laugh about!

So little Mamselle Dionne is learning to count. To count and to travel. Travel is "broadening" Mamselle. She is beginning to know that a little girl can go places. Even if she has to crawl. She is not perfectly content any more to stay in one spot and not see the world with the world brought TO her. AND SHE WILL NEVER BE AGAIN!

From now on the little Mademoiselles Dionne will learn more and more the meaning of five toes, counting, singing and laughing; learn that a young lady must travel on and on, more and more on her own two feet, with a head that must learn the meaning of life to direct them.

Fathers and mothers, loving ones, hope that their child who is a baby now, just beginning to find the world is "full of a number of things," will learn to travel wisely on the two feet that began their EDUCATION with "THIS LITTLE PIG—"

Even Handkerchiefs Have a Fashion Story

Latest for Brides and Fathers

By ANNICE BRINK
Fashion Editor

THE HANDKERCHIEF has joined the bridal procession.

In a Boston shop you will find the handkerchief in bridal sets, quite as meticulous in who shall have which as the order of the procession to the altar.

Herein lies a tale, because the hankie is a fetish in this particular department, and you'll find the one you want, whether it's a gally flowered whimsy (newest for sports wear) or a real lace and fine linen bit to offer on the altar of friendship when birthdays or Christmas come around.

In net, with border frill having applique flowers, or in chiffon, with organdy border (this does not fold up to nothing, the organdy keeping the chiffon afloat nicely), you will find the bridal set—a large handkerchief for the bride, and a distinctly smaller, though matching, size for the bridesmaids.

Because weddings have gone ruffly on us this summer this type of handkerchief fits the motif beautifully.

If the bridesmaids are in pastels they may have duplicates of the bride's larger white hankie in pastels to match or contrast with their frocks.

One of the daintiest ideas purveyed in this department is the handkerchief with extra full flounced border, also linen with lace edging. It is suggested that old-fashioned nosegays for the bridesmaids be tucked into the center of such a handkerchief, with the edging making a delicate, lacy collarette for the nosegay, instead of the usual paper lace.

For sportswear, the scrap-size hankie is ignored. Almost mansize linen squares with hand-rolled edges, either monotone or with appliqued or printed designs are favorites. The flower-printed hankie is newer than geometric-prints.

A handkerchief offers a grand opportunity for striking contrast—a point which we took it for granted everyone knew. But it appears that a great many people take pains to match a hankie to the frock or suit with which it is to be worn, and then wonder why the effect is not so good! Ask the salegirl to help you choose the right contrast. From experience, she's a past master at it.

Tomorrow being Father's Day, if you have not already bought his little memento of your love, dash in and find the snappiest thing in masculine breast-pocket adornment. It's a two-fisted effect initialed handkerchief, with woven borders and hand-rolled hems, in the darker colors to go with the darker tones in shirts that are worn with summer suits. Grey, maroon, green, blue, or brown. Solid dark colors for linen suits—purple, lilac, maroon, brown, navy, black, and even pastels—are smart.

Unusual NEW Appetizers

By MARTHA LEE

THE AMERICAN term for "hors d'oeuvres"—appetizers—is even better than the French idiom, because it tells exactly what the dishes are used for.

The idea of an appetizer is to shift your appetite into high gear, and put your senses of appreciation in tune with the symphony of flavors which is to follow.

There are dozens of ways of making appetizers. Women who pride themselves on their ability to serve something novel find a real joy in making and serving appetizers, because they can always find a way to make some that are different from any they have served before. And after the appetizers are prepared, there are many interesting and novel ways of serving them. Some hostesses like to mount them on toothpicks stuck in a big red apple, or an orange, like so many pins in a pin-cushion. A tray bearing an apple or two, with each apple bristling with toothpicks carrying delicious appetizers, is enough to stimulate any appetite.

Here are some recipes for highly unusual appetizers that will make your guests sit up and take notice.

LIVER SAUSAGE AND OLIVE BUTTER CANAPE

6 oblong pieces of bread
1 tbsp. butter
6 tbsps. liver sausage
2 tbsps. olive butter
1 tsp. grated onion
½ cake of cream cheese
6 stuffed olives
Sardine pasta

Sauté bread in butter. Combine liver sausage, olive butter, and onion. Mix to a smooth paste. Spread on bread. Decorate with stuffed olives, topped with sardine paste. Pipe cream cheese around edge of canape.

SAUSAGE AND PRUNE APPETIZERS

6 prepared prunes
12 small Vienna sausages

Place a prepared prune on a toothpick between two sausages. Toast under the broiler, or bake in a hot oven until the sausages begin to brown. Cool slightly before serving.

MAYONNAISE PUFFS

1 egg white, stiffly beaten
½ cup mayonnaise
Canape crackers or butterthins

Fold the mayonnaise into egg white. Pile on crackers and toast under the broiler one minute, or until delicately browned and puffed.

CREAM CHEESE APPETIZERS

1 cup of cream cheese
2 tbsps. chili sauce
Worcestershire sauce to taste
Salt and pepper to taste
Slices of dried beef
Potato chips

Mix together the cream cheese and chili sauce, stir in a few drops of Worcestershire, and season to taste. Spread on dried beef slices, roll tightly and fasten with toothpicks. Or, spread on potato chips and serve.

LEE CONFESSES HIS PLAN TO MADGE

CHAPTER 371

"OH! IS this necessary?" I exclaimed explosively as Lee Chow said that to tell his story he must go back to the time, years ago, when he first found out that I was the "hidden desire" of his friend's heart, that without me Hugh's life was "a desert, a waste place."

He opened his eyes to their fullest capacity and looked at me with a surprised dignity that I guessed he meant should abash me.

"If it were not necessary for your proper understanding of my story, I never should dream of troubling you with it," he said, and I closed my lips tightly upon any further protest. He continued his steady gaze at me for a second, and then, evidently seeing that I did not mean to speak again, resumed his story. I kept myself from jumping up and running from the room only by the stern reminder that not only Hugh, but my father, was depending upon me to learn the secret behind the attack upon Dicky, to which we believed the high-born Chinese held the key.

FOR HIS FRIEND, HUGH

"There are few accidentals who know the meaning of friendship as the Chinese know it," Lee Chow said, and I breathed more freely at his change of subject.

"My friend, Hugh Grantland, is one of those few," the faint voice went on. "I owe him more than ever can be told. I owe him my life many times over, and for years I have felt that my life was not my own, but must be held ready either for unstinted service to him, or even, if necessary, for the supreme sacrifice of forfeiting it for him."

I looked curiously at him. No, there was no semblance of madness in his eyes; instead, an unusual clarity. His was an inflexible purpose. I realized, and I shivered slightly at the recurrence of my fear that Hugh's fanatical friend might still be planning to remove Dicky from my life, in the hope that I then would turn to Hugh.

NO FURTHER FEAR

He had turned his eyes from me, but in some subtle fashion he was aware of my shuddering fear, and he looked squarely at me again.

"You are afraid of me," he said, "not for yourself, but for your husband. May I reassure you now, once and for all, that you need never fear me more? I was so benumbed after my—my seizure—that I could not make Hugh realize that I understood him. Yet I did know what he was saying, although I could not speak, and I want you to take this message back to him—that I accept what he has told me concerning you and your husband, and that I will obey his commands."

It was all I could do to keep from crying out, "What commands? What did he tell you?" But knowing something of the queer psychology of the man facing me, I kept silent, and had the gratification of seeing a faint glint of approval come into the black eyes regarding me so steadily.

LEE CHOW'S PLANS

"You know when to keep silence," he said, and the tone with which he invested the words was equal to the most extravagant praise from many men. "Therefore," he went on, "I shall tell you willingly what Hugh's commands were, but you must bear with me first until I tell you what my plans have been for you all these years."

He stopped and I fairly held my breath. What was he going to say next? The whole interview seemed so bizarre, so fantastic that I felt like pinching myself to make sure that it was a reality.

"My friend's is a nature that never changes," he continued, "and when I realized that, unless he could win you, he never would have a wife, I resolved that if possible I would cause a breach between you and your husband."

I stared at him in amazement. He was telling me this astounding thing as calmly as if he were expressing a preference for rolls rather than toast for breakfast.

"This surprises you," he said, with his mirthless smile again in evidence. "Then, I wonder what you will say when I tell you that this was the reason underlying my appeal to you for help, when we pursued our search for Hugh and rescued him from his intended murderers — for they would have been that if we had not come in time."

Art of False-Carding

False-carding is an art which many players abuse, because they false-card too often.

The only good false-card is one which looks natural, and which would be a necessary play if the player's holding were slightly different.

There are certain standard situations in which an effective false-card is possible. Every player should try to learn these, and to use them whenever possible. He should in other cases seek to make the natural play.

If he false-cards consistently, the other players will learn to distrust him, which will spoil the value of false-cards which might be successful if they were believed.

The following deal illustrates one of the finest false-cards which is used by expert players.

The play looks quite logical and often gains a trick. In one case which I remember, it cost a national championship to a declarer who "fell for it."

North, Dealer,
Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♡ | Pass | 1 ♠ | Pass |
| 1 NT. | Pass | 2 NT. | Pass |
| 4 ♠ (1) | Pass | 4 ♣ (2) | Pass |
| Pass | Pass | | |

(1) With only two trumps, North should not have assisted a suit which had not been rebid; but the two trumps were so strong that the bid was not bad.

(2) South was correct in bidding the game in spades rather than no trump.

West opened the three of hearts, dummy won with the King and East casually dropped the Queen.

This false-card might have been read had South bothered to count the hearts which would be in West's hand if the Queen were a singleton; for if West had the 10 of hearts his lead was fifth-best rather than fourth-best.

The problem, however, would still have been present—was East false-carding, or had West made an unconventional lead?

As it happens, the declarer did not even analyze the situation.

His proper play under normal circumstances would have been to cash the spade Ace, overtake the spade Queen with the King and lead the 10 from his own hand, to drive out trumps immediately and insure making his contract.

But this declarer feared that a heart would be rifled against him. So he attempted to draw all the trumps.

He cashed the top trumps, entered his hand with the club Ace (fearing that a diamond lead would let West in to play hearts) and laid down the spade King.

When the Jack did not fall, there was still the comforting thought that East and not West had the remaining trump.

South not only remained confident, he expected to make an overtrick by finessing for the 10 of hearts and discarding both his club losers.

Calmly he led the heart eight and finessed dummy's nine. Equally calmly East took the heart 10 and cashed two club tricks. And there's a diamond Ace and high trump set the contract.

Fashion Flashes

VELVETS will be used for practically every known occasion this fall. There are transparent velvets with gold polka dots, half-moons and stripes.

But the dramatic highlight of the fall fabric show is a new velvet called ramoneur, named after the chimney sweeps of Paris, black with interwoven cellophane, sparkling like shiny lumps of coal. Chanel did it.

MAXIE 'Won,' Says CHILD

HER NAME IS ROSE BRADDOCK

By MARJORIE REX
International News Service Special Correspondent.

Gutenberg, N. J., June 15—Daddy brought home the bacon for the three small Braddocks—but it's Maxie Baer, that old lady killer, whose sex appeal captivated the champion's daughter, Rose Marie.

Rose Marie is 2½, perhaps the smallest blonde who ever "went for" Maxie and she is somehow convinced that although her Daddy won the title, Maxie won the fight.

She likes Max, there is no getting away from it, and neither mother's doleful eye nor the adhesive plaster on daddy's ear will change her mind.

A reporter who tried to interview Rose Marie was an punchdrunk after the 10th question as Max was after the 15th round.

"How old are you, Rose Marie?" was what started it all.

"Wow, Maxie!" she replied.

She id a few turns on tip-toe.

"Do you like to dance?"

Rose Marie grinned.

The reporter staggered a little that was obviously Rose Marie's round.

"What do you want to be when you grow up?"

"Maxie," she smiled angelically.

She is a petite, active small thing with short yellow hair and enormous eyes, dark like her daddy's.

"What would you like to have?" she was asked.

She brightened hesitated grinned.

"Maxie," she said.

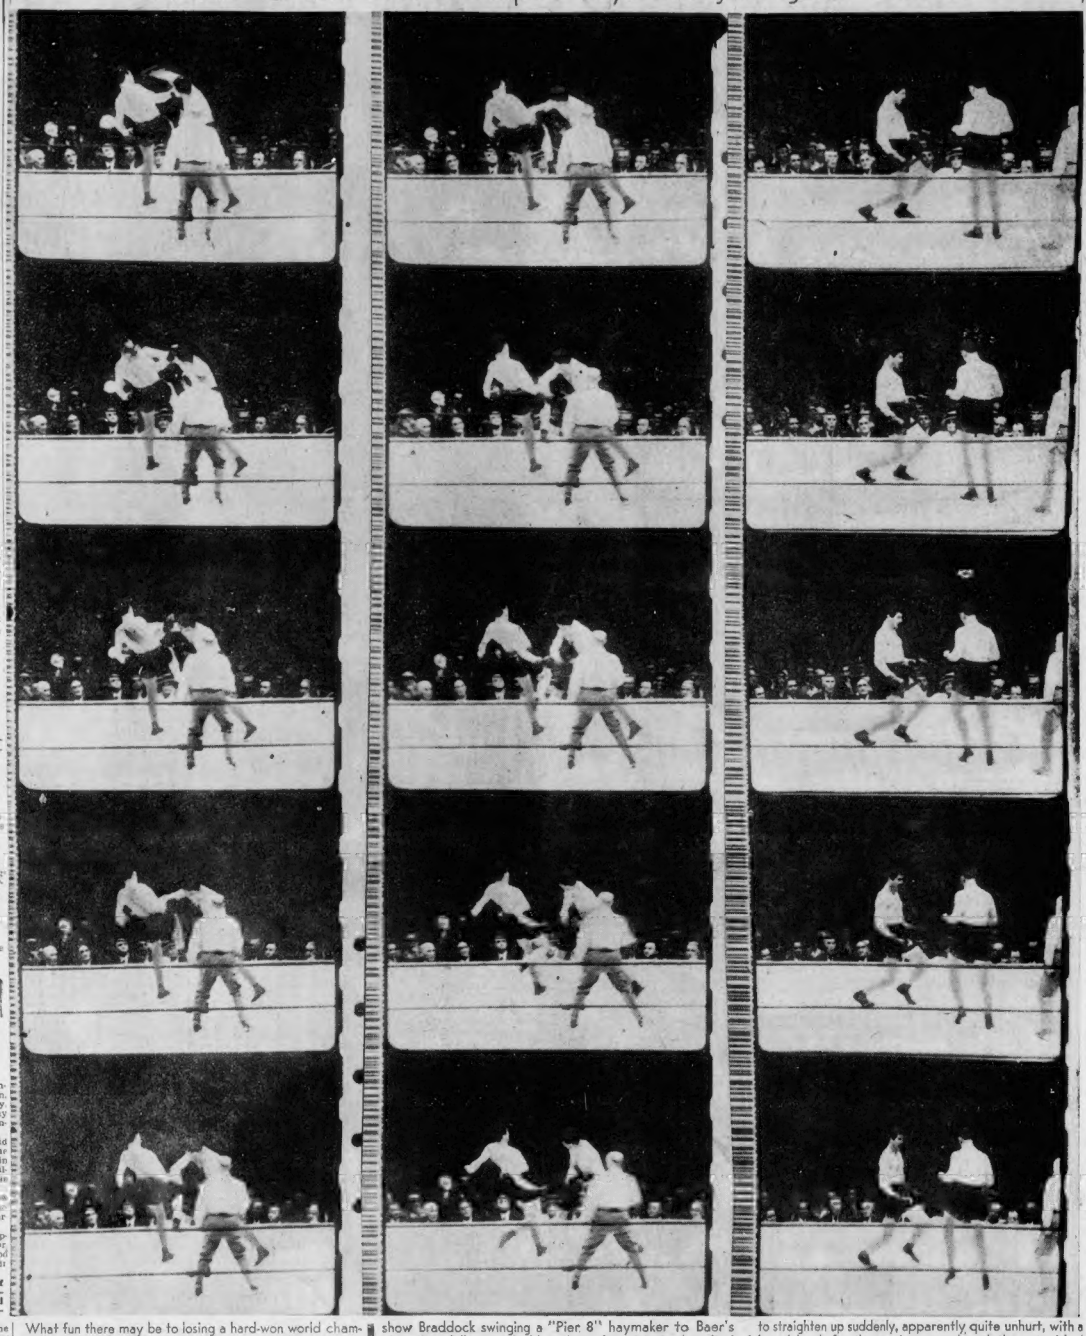
'All in Fun' for Baer as He Burlesques 'Kayo' in Eighth Against Braddock



What fun there may be to losing a hard-won world championship fight title Playboy Maxie seems to be enjoying as he gives clowning pretense of being groggy and near a knockout in the eighth round of his "slow quadrille" with Jimmy Braddock. These pictures taken from movie strips show Braddock swinging a "Pier 8" haymaker to Baer's chin, then following the blow through as Maxie, knocked off balance, steps back and goes into his burlesque act, wobbling his knees in a stagey stagger, dropping his hands, pretending to be about to sag to the canvas, only to straighten up suddenly, apparently quite unhurt, with a broad laugh for the gaping crowd and the astonished challenger. (Picture by Harry O. Voiler, through International News Photograph Service.)

QUINCY MAYOR SWINGS AXE

In conformance with his campaign promises, Thomas S. Burgin, newly elected mayor of Quincy, swung his first official axe today and discharged Public Works Commissioner Angelo Bizzozero.

The discharge of Bizzozero and other department heads was the principal issue of the election in which Burgin defeated Leo E. Mullin, acting mayor and head of the city council.

In Bizzozero's place the new mayor appointed Ezekiel C. Sargent, Quincy contractor and former city engineer.

The removal of Bizzozero, an appointee of the ousted mayor, Charles A. Ross, was for the good of the service of the city," Burgin stated. He added:

"In my opinion his operation of said office was carried on without due regard to efficiency and economical disbursement of public funds."

'NOT GUILTY' In Baseball Death

Taunton, June 15 (AP)—Leo F. Bailey, 32, of Holbrook, today pleaded not guilty in District court to manslaughter in connection with the death of Clifford L. Chace, 52, of Taunton, and was released in $4000 bail. The case was continued until June 26.

J. H. FAHEY Again Blocked

Washington, June 15 (INS)—Confirmation of John H. Fahey of Massachusetts, for reappointment to a six-year term on the Federal Home Loan Bank board, was blocked in the Senate again today by Senator Russell (D) of Georgia.

Russell charges there is "too much autocracy and czarism" in the Home Loan agency.

Will Mortgage Home to Free Man Held by "Lies"

Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. O'Connell today declared they would mortgage their homestead to free Arthur J. O'Connell, who is serving 8-12 years for attack on a 13-year-old Roxbury girl.

They pointed out that the farm on which they live in East Rindge, N. H., was bought with money that O'Connell and his brother, Henry, have been sending home for the past 10 years. Sentenced Wednesday after being found guilty of attempted attack on one of the girls, O'Connell wept bitterly in court and reiterated his assertions of innocence.

There was no apparent prospect o. his immediate release from prison, pending report to the court from Mrs. Bohmbach.

"Investigation is being made," Dist. Atty. Foley said. "We are trying to find out to whom the girls' second story was first told."

If the authorities believe that the girls made their serious charge against O'Connell "just for fun," the regular procedure would be for O'Connell to be brought into court for a new trial.

"Since he is now in prison," Foley said, "he would probably be tried immediately. If it develops that the girls were guilty of perjury at the first trial, they naturally would not be put on the stand again, O'Connell would be found not guilty because there would be nobody to testify against him."

VOIDS ALL MILK CONTRACTS

Joseph C. Cort, administrator and member of the Massachusetts Control Board, today ordered the suspension of all wholesale contracts in which dealers sell milk at lower prices than the minimum price authorized by the board.

This order is a new move to stabilize the Greater Boston milk market. From unofficial sources, it was learned the retail price of milk will not be affected.

The suspension was ordered under a ruling by Attorney General Paul A. Dever. It applies to contracts held by state and municipal institutions, dealers and private organizations, such as restaurants, hospitals and hotels, that buy milk in large quantities.

The ruling applies also to contracts made before the law went into effect.

FOY APPOINTED BY PRESIDENT

By Associated Press

Washington, June 15—President Roosevelt today reappointed Frank C. Walker of New York as executive director of the National Emergency Council.

This office has been re-established as an organization separate from the old NRA.

The President also sent to the Senate the nomination of Frank H. Foy to be Massachusetts state director in the National Emergency Council.

Howard W. Oxley of New York was named director of CCC camp education, and Silas Rancopher of New York assistant director.

'LONESOME WIFE' DEAD

Husband Away, She Joins Gay Party With Salesman and Drug Addict

Chicago, June 15—A man and a woman were held by police today in the tragic "party" death of Mrs. Marguerite Ford McGivney, 29, a "lonesome" wife who stepped out when her husband took a business trip.

Mrs. McGivney, wife of Walter L. McGivney, head of a wholesale millinery firm, died yesterday on the way to a hospital following a protracted drinking party.

Mrs. Lucille Fleigelman, 27, a confessed drug addict, and Lissel Leix, 31, a salesman in a loop shoe store, her companions on the party, were the two held by police pending an autopsy to determine the definite cause of death of Mrs. McGivney.

According to Mrs. Fleigelman and Leix, the trio accompanied by another man joined in a drinking spree and about 1 a. m., Leix said, he fell asleep in a hotel room Mrs. McGivney had reserved.

WIFE SLAIN, RIVAL FLEES

By International News Service

New York, June 15—The love of his wife he could not have, so Peter Christ, 32, slashed her to death today while their 7-year-old son cowered in a corner.

Then, while the fire of his fury burned itself out, Christ arranged an "execution chair" for the supposed suitor of his wife, Stella, 28, but was unsuccessful in his plan to torture Contakin Kolouras to death.

With a blackjack Christ felled Stella after he and their son had gone to the apartment Mrs. Christ shared with Kolouras. Then he handcuffed the woman from whom he has been separated for five years and slashed her to death.

Boy Sees Terror

Wide-eyed and terror stricken the boy watched his mother's blood flow. He watched, too, while his father bathed Stella's body, then hid it in a trunk under piles of linen.

His gruesome task half completed, Christ took his key back to his apartment. Returning to the house of death, he grimly sat beside the trunk waiting for Kolouras.

In a corner was the "execution chair" and a heavy rope with which Christ planned to bind the man and then slay him by slow stages.

Kolouras arrived. He entered with his key. There was a bitter scene of confession and threats.

Kolouras fled as Christ emptied a pistol at him, one bullet taking effect, but wounding the fleeing man only slightly.

Christ, an orderly in a Brooklyn hospital, his hospital uniform stained with blood, rushed out of the apartment and went to the office of the Daily Mirror.

His Confession

Brandishing pistol, knife and blackjack, he screamed:

"I've murdered my wife! I loved her but she was a bad woman!"

Quickly he was disarmed and police were called.

Christ explained he married Stella 10 years ago, that she had left him five years ago, that he vainly had attempted a reconciliation, and went to his wife's apartment to attempt to dissuade her from obtaining a divorce.

Stella, he said, kicked him when he pleaded with her and then, in a fury of jealousy and rage, he struck her with the blackjack.

Police went to find the little son. He was asleep. They awakened him, and he said:

"I did not love my mother."

FRENCH PLANES ROUT GERMAN

By Associated Press

Metz, France, June 15—French pursuit planes today chased two German ships, which were hovering over frontier fortifications, back into German territory.

Military officials said the German craft were first observed over the defense works known as the "Petite Rosewl" northwest of Metz.

Several French planes set to guard against such excursions promptly took to the air, but the German airmen turned and fled, escaping over the border before their pursuers caught up with them.

AUSTEN LAKE

Portrait Of a Country Boy Who Made Good

EVEN IN THE PALMIEST DAYS of his personal boom, Babe Ruth was never so hard to reach as is the sad-faced, ex-farm boy called Dizzy Dean.

Austen Lake

You used to jiggle the house phone, and presently the Babe would rumble in his deep bass growl, "Hop up, kid." You went up in the lift, turned down the carpeted hallways and there, at his chamber door, stood the Babe, usually in a brocaded lounging robe.

There would be a breakfast table under a big top table cloth, containing a jumble of nickeled hotel coffee pot, the rinds of a melon, soggy cigar butts coming apart in the cups and some butter pats flicked with ash. And the Babe would say, "Have a bite a somethin', kid?"

It was as simple as that.

But with Dizzy you are detoured to the Cardinals' traveling secretary, Clarence Lloyd, who examines your business and, if you are legitimate, says he will see whether Dizzy will make an appointment.

Absentee Author

HERE IS AN UNSUSPECTED SIDE to the pitcher whose crackpot nonsense is celebrated in our sport-page jottings.

This supposed monkey-on-the-stick character, publicized for his inflated ego and called a yokel clown, is sensitive to what he says is a false personality, willfully misshaped by the press.

"Nine-tenths of the stuff that's published about me," he complained, "I have never said."

That is largely his own fault, since, at the moment, he has lent his name to a ghosting syndicate, which sells his synthetic sayings in rube dialect.

Dizzy never edits the manuscript, which is uniformly a pretty bad job of journalistic tripe, but he draws his royalties.

So if Dis does not author his own literature and delegates the chore to a literary spook, I do not see how he can justly complain of its quality.

The ghost syndicate, which forges the material, is satisfied because the business of writing under anybody's name, providing he is sufficiently famous or notorious, is just a job of tapping out copy.

And the papers which buy the counterfeit and pass it for genuine on a credulous people are content, because it has a recognized circulation value.

Then, why should Dizzy be mortified?

$250,000; Key to Quit

"Two more years and I'll have my quarter of a million," continued La Dean, "then I'm through."

When that time came, he said, not all the king's cavalry, not all the fearful begging of Sam Breadon, or the petitions of the masses, will stop him from retiring to his pretty little cottage at Bradenton, Fla.

Needless to say Dizzy will not quit until his rubber arm loses its stretch and the frosts of athletic age freeze his joints. That time is at least 10 years off. For he is only 24 now.

He was walking behind the binder, cocking the bundled wheat, shucking the mountain corn for winter cribbing, stringing dry onions from the kitchen rafters, feeling cool pasture grass under his nude feet.

Fortune had been God-father to the eccentric lad, and his ability to throw a baseball harder and surer than any other in his league is winning him quick riches and fame, with his picture next to pure reading matter in the papers.

Quit? Sure, when his legs in some distant day say, "I've given you a nice ride, big-boy. Here's where you get off." When

ZAITZ LEAVES For Coast Meet

Dimitri Zaitz, star shot putter of Boston College, will entrain at the South Station tonight for Berkley, Cal., where he will represent New England in the National Collegiate A. A. championships next Friday and Saturday.

Dimmy, who is the New England champion shot putter, was the first New England college athlete to toss the shot over 50 f eet, which he did in Portland several weeks ago to win the N. E. crown.

In a practice heave before that competition, the 211 pound, 6 foot, 2 inch Boston College junior, gave the 16 pound iron ball a 53 foot, 4 inch ride, according to Coach Jack Ryder, who measured it himself.

Joy Offsets Alibi

Jimmy Braddock, new heavyweight champion, and his wife receive congratulations and well wishes from their friends at door of their hotel suite.

OWENS Faces Coast STARS

By Universal Service

Los Angeles, June 15 — Ohio's chocolate soldier of the track and field was today makes a one-man stand here against the three musketeers of the University of Southern California.

Before a crowd which is expected to reach the 43,000 mark, Jesse Owens of Ohio State, the greatest track and field athlete of all time, competes in four events against Foy Draper, Albert Olson and Norman Paul of U. S. C. with George Boone and Al Fitch and Eddie Hall thrown in to make it look good, as Buckeyes and Trojans clash in a dual meet at the coliseum.

This meet, because of the presence of this one great athlete, Owens, will draw more people than were present at the national collegiate championships here last summer.

First places only will be scored, one point for each under the English system, and this gives Ohio State a fine chance against the IC 4A champions who have been limited to 20 men, but who, when at full strength under the convention system of 5, 3 and 1, constitute the greatest track team in America.

'Mile of Century' At Princeton

Princeton, N. J., June 15—Six of the greatest milers in the history of track dig their cleats into the Palmer Stadium cinders here this afternoon in what should be the fastest mile ever run.

The mile is the feature of a six-event program, in each of which the super stars of the generation will compete in their specialties.

Glenn Cunningham is top man in the mile. His opposition comes from Jack Lovelock, Bill Bonthron, Pennsylvania's Gene Venzke, Glenn Dawson and Joe Mangan, who set a new three-quarters record a week ago.

A new record, lowering Cunningham's present outdoor mark of 4:08.7, is well within reason.

The Princeton track is ideal for record breaking. It was here that Lovelock, then representing Oxford University, established a record of 4:07.6, with Bonthron finishing second to Lovelock in 4:08.7.

Then along came Cunningham on the same track to set the record which the sextet are after today.

Cunningham must be rated the favorite through his exceptional brilliancy over a period of time. He holds both indoor and outdoor records and has beaten with consistency every man in the field with the exception of Lovelock, who at this writing appears to be the most formidable contender in the group.

It is certain, that Lovelock wouldn't be over here if he didn't feel confident of a fine showing.

Keith Brown, who recently established a new record for the pole vault, will face stern opposition from Bill Graber, formerly of Southern California, the man whose previous mark the Yale sky pilot lowered.

Henry Nelsen, Denmark's 3000-meter world record holder, races Don Lash, mile and two-mile Big Ten record holder, in the two-mile run, just two of a great field of distance runners.

Glenn Hardin of Louisiana State, Jim LuValle and Eddie O'Brien, I. C. 4-A. champion and runner-up respectively, and Ivan Fuqua, the only man to win from Hardin in two years, clash in the quarter mile.

The hurdles field is a standout with Percy Beard, Johnny Morriss, Alvin Moreau, John Collier and Sam Allen, all of whom are possible record breakers.

Boxing Results

Fargo, N. D. — Frankie Saglio, 138, Chicago, scored an easy six-round victory over Frankie Kaniecki, 138, Winnipeg.

Mat Results

Philadelphia—Dan O Mahoney, Ireland, 218, pinned George Zaharias, Parbin, Colo., in 11:31 with body slam and body press.

Braddock Always a Game 'un

Proved it in Battles as Schoolboy;

By Jack Conway

As a youngster, the new champion didn't go around with a "chip" on his shoulder, but when the occasion required he could defend himself in a two-handed battle.

Braddock had two schoolboy fights. He won both of them by knockouts.

Braddock made his debut as a professional boxer at the age of 16. He boxed under the name of Jimmy Ryan and had Tommy Hummell as an opponent.

It was a terrific four-round bout. There was plenty of wide open punching and very little scientific boxing. Braddock had his opponent down three times, and hit the canvas once himself.

It was natural for Braddock to be interested in boxing. As a messenger boy of 12 years of age, he carried copy for a newspaper bulletin board on the Dempsey-Willard championship bout.

He rooted for a Dempsey victory and has been an admirer of the old tiger since.

J. J.'S IDOL

Braddock came from a family of scrappers. Brothers Ralph, Joe and Al each gained honors in the ring.

As an amatgur boxer, Jimmy scored 43 victories in as many starts. He battled under the colors of the Jersey Irish-American Club.

Braddock engaged in his first professional bout at Ridgefield Park, N. J. He received $35 for his end of the purse.

Joe Gould, who later became Braddock manager, used to train his boxers at Jeanette's Gym. He had a boxer by the name of Harry Galfund under his direction. Gould sought a sparring partner for Galfund.

Braddock was working out in the gym at the time. Gould asked him if he wished to box with Galfund, and Jimmy, a skinny kid at the time, readily consented.

Gould immediately decided to place Jimmy under his management.

The Braddock-Gould combination has finally won a world's championship. During the greater part of their boxing partnership they didn't have any contract. It was a case of two pals battling their way to the top.

Braddock is Irish-American. Gould Jewish-American. This has always been a winning combination in boxing.

In the case of Jewish-American boxers, they do their best work when they have Irish-American managers.

HELEN Seeks Aid of COACH

WILLING TO BE ON CUP TEAM

By Universal Service

Beckenham, Eng., June 15—Determination to turn yesterday's defeat into victory at Wimbledon gripped Helen Wills Moody today after she had been eliminated from the Kent tournament by Kay Stammers. Yesterday's defeat taught her the faults of her comeback game, Mrs. Moody said.

The statements of victor and vanquished:

Helen Wills Moody:

"Today's incident makes not the slightest difference in my Wimbledon plans. I am going ahead practicing with the assistant professional at the All-England Club.

"I am trying to have some tryouts with Coach Maskell, but I am afraid he is tied up with the British Davis Cup team.

"I cannot say whether I shall play on the American Wightman Cup team. I have not been asked yet. It is up to the selectors. If they ask me, I will play.

Praises Victor

"I think Miss Stammers played marvelously today. I congratulate her.

"The trouble from my point of view was her hard hitting. She hardly made any mistakes.

"Tyrrell, Miss St. George and Beckenham have been valuable experience. I now know where my game has slipped and all of next week I will be trying to improve it.

"I am living at Great Foster's the whole of next week and during the Wimbledon fortnight. There are excellent courts at Great Foster's and a good professional, so my schedule is established.

"I offer no excuses for today's beating. I just found somebody playing better than I could. Kay Stammers is very much improved since last I saw her."

Helen Off Game

Kay Stammers: "Somebody had to beat Mrs. Moody sooner or later, and I happened to be that one. I had determined to attack all the time, whatever happened, either driving as hard as I could or using drop shots or short angles. As I knew I must make Mrs. Moody run if I were to win.

"Today she appeared rather slower than usual and was not hitting as hard as I had expected her to, but I had not played against her before.

"At times I felt a bit 'dithery' with my service.

Pitts to Use Radio In Fight

Albany, N. Y., June 15 (INS)—With his baseball future still in the hands of Judge K. M. Landis, Elmer Ambrose Pitts, former Sing Sing prison athlete, left for New York city today.

Pitts will be interviewed over the radio tonight by Johnny Evers, general manager of the Albany club, International League, who signed the young southpaw to a organized baseball with Pitts and Warden Lewis E. Lawes of Sing Sing, who has joined in the fight against a ban on the ex-convict by organized baseball, with Pitts and Evers at Ossining, accompanied them to New York.

Before leaving Albany Evers said no word has been volunteered by Judge Landis, but that he expected a ruling either today or Monday. He denied that any inkling of Landis' decision had reached him.

Other winners included Clarvoe in the third, $6.60, and Lilly Andrews in the ninth, $4.80. Three of Cohen's other choices ran second.

Society Column Choice in First

By Dave Wilson

(SELECTIONS MADE FOR FAST TRACK)
BEST BET—LORD TOURNAMENT, 3RD

Rockingham Park, June 15—Lord Tournament, Mrs. A. R. Smith's good sprinter, is the choicest morsel on the big "get away" card here on Monday afternoon.

The swift-running son of Tournament 2nd is dropping down and will be meeting only indifferent ones in the five and one-half furlongs of the third stanza. He whirled four panels in :47 2-5 this morning for a final.

FIRST RACE

SOCIETY COLUMN, BLIND TALK, DARK THATCH

FIRST RACE—Maiden two-year-olds. General Precott, claiming, $800. Five furlongs.

| F. P. | Horse | Wt. | Jockey | P. Odds | Comment |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 6 | Society Column | 115 | Wall | 2-1 | Mr. Neat Away Special" |
| 5 | Blind Talk | 115 | Wagner | 4-1 | Speedy Contender. |
| 11 | Dark Thatch | 110 | Sullivan | 5-1 | Seconds to cash book. |
| 4 | Kreno | 109 | C. Hanford | 6-1 | Rates good chance. |
| 12 | Lightwright | 118 | Laidley | 8-1 | Dangerous if started. |
| 10 | Sir Rollie | 118 | Schaefer | 8-1 | Second in Canadian "riding." |
| 9 | Terry On | 114 | Horvath | 10-1 | Improved last time. |
| 15 | Sky Pilot | 118 | Bethel | 10-1 | Some good races. |
| 16 | Free Spirit | 114 | Ball | 15-1 | Poor form. |
| 13 | Sambo Jones | 114 | Wall | 15-1 | Vanderbilt; look out. |
| 14 | Stumble | 112 | Faust | 15-1 | On the improve. |
| 18 | Spear | 3102 | Faust | 20-1 | |
| 11 | Irish Hero | 3105 | Bell | 20-1 | |
| 3 | Bay | 118 | Bethel | 20-1 | |
| 7 | September Child | 110 | Wagner | 30-1 | |
| 8 | Uncle Joly | 3109 | Wagner | 30-1 | |
| 17 | Pin Ax | 3106 | Schaefer | 30-1 | |
| 1 | Jolly Faye | 115 | Winters | 30-1 | |

Shooting for a price here and I expect to get same if SOCIETY COLUMN runs back to morning trials. That last effort was in the nature of a conditioner and may be tossed into discard. BLIND TALK is a recent arrival from New York and may come up one of those "Good Things." Past performances show that he is a gun from the barrier. DARK THATCH displayed good form in placing to Cash Book last trip. He may take the whole pot.

SECOND—WEE TUNE, FAST MOVE, BILLY WISE

SECOND RACE—The Monument, three-year-olds and up, claiming, $800. six furlongs.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 2 | Wee Tune | 103 | Wall | 2-1 | Should have won last |
| 8 | Fast Move | 116 | Allen | 3-1 | Worked well for this |
| 10 | Billie Wise | 3106 | Faust | 4-1 | Five panels 1:06 2-5 |
| 11 | Unerrant | 111 | Wagner | 5-1 | Not the last time |
| 9 | Appomattox | 111 | Finnerty | 6-1 | Last very good |
| 3 | Minos | 103 | Laidley | 10-1 | May come to life |
| 4 | Thirtiwad | 3109 | Sims | 15-1 | Good stable |
| 12 | Our Rose | 111 | Schaefer | 15-1 | Having best time |
| 16 | Mergit | 116 | Knapp | 15-1 | May suit here |
| 15 | Marque Vic | 3108 | Woodyard | 15-1 | Can't get to the |
| 14 | Winged Flight | 108 | Whaley | 15-1 | Fast colt |
| 13 | Wee Sprite | 3110 | Fallon | 15-1 | Closer if ready |
| 18 | By Product | 111 | Fallon | 15-1 | Figures not poor |
| 5 | Dark Devil | 116 | Rondera | 30-1 | Used to form |
| 6 | Dunbar | 3111 | Green | 30-1 | Cheap maiden |
| 1 | Red Label | 103 | Bloomer | 30-1 | |

Just can't pass up WEE TUNE in searching for the winner here. The B. B. colorbearer's recent second to Lulu Lite at fair trade can be discounted. FAST MOVE is the clocker's tip. She turned a half-mile in :47 2-5 in company with Lord Tournament this morning. BILLY WISE is not far away from brackets if morning trials are any criterion. They caught him in 1:00 2-5 in a five-furlongs workout this morning.

THIRD—LORD TOURNAMENT, JESSIE D M. CIVIL WAR

THIRD RACE—General Wares, three-year-olds and up, claiming, $1000, 5½ furlongs.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 10 | Lord Tournament | 113 | Allen | 5-2 | My best bet |
| 8 | Jessie D M | 105 | Stout | 4-1 | The main danger |
| 9 | Civil War | 3101 | Wagner | 5-1 | Dangerous in best form |
| 11 | Smooth | 3107 | C. Hanford | 8-1 | Drubbed cheaper ones |
| 3 | Judge Schilling | 113 | Wall | 8-1 | Can't get hands |
| 5 | Pinafore | 114 | Hughes | 8-1 | Throw out last |
| 6 | Dunn Lad | 118 | Fallon | 10-1 | Rates good chance |
| 12 | Pancha | 3104 | Faust | 10-1 | Moving up |
| 1 | Tekan | 3105 | Bernard | 10-1 | Trouble down |
| 16 | Flashing Thru | 110 | Elston | 10-1 | Speedy; usually quits |
| 15 | Rock Bessie | 105 | Wagner | 15-1 | Lost behind |
| 4 | Lan | 3108 | Johnson | 15-1 | May beat this rating |
| 14 | Sunny Lady | 108 | Ball | 15-1 | Never better |
| 2 | Clear Knight | 110 | Schutte | 30-1 | Speedy quitter |

LORD TOURNAMENT shapes up as the one solid horse on the card. Anything upsetting him will make him a drubbing it will likely be JESSE D M. The latter displayed high speed in winning her last start. CIVIL WAR is endowed with a smattering of class and will prove dangerous if up to a good race.

FOURTH—PIKE ENTRY, VANDERBILT ENTRY, THE DARB

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 5 | Gerbrooke | 102 | Johnson | 5-2 | Figures best on last |
| 1 | Indiantown | 108 | Schutte | 5-2 | Saved for this |
| 8 | Time Flight | 103 | Wall | 4-1 | May take it all |
| 3 | Direl | 118 | Fallon | 5-1 | Last good; more weight |
| 4 | Beholder Dinner | 103 | Knapp | 6-1 | Rates good chance |
| 2 | The Darb | 112 | Hughes | 6-1 | Mud would help |
| 10 | Furtimes | 101 | Ball | 6-1 | Is right enough |
| 9 | Candy Maid | 98 | Wagner | 6-1 | Speedy; moving up |
| 7 | Pancha | 108 | Faust | 10-1 | Couldn't beat top one |
| 6 | All Forlorn | 108 | Munden | 15-1 | Chance if ready |
| 11 | Indian | 108 | Bernard | 15-1 | Has the utmost |

CARISBROOKE, INDIANTOWN and TIME FLIGHT, which will run coupled in the wagering as the PIKE ENTRY, figure to stand a world of beating here. All three are in splendid shape and each is capable of winning. The VANDERBILT ENTRY of DREEL and BACHELOR DINNER figures close up. THE DARB, a superior muddler, may take the entire pot if the gumbo comes up.

FIFTH — DON GUZMAN, THE DARB, THOMASVILLE

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 5 | Don Guzman | 119 | Rodrigues | 2-1 | Figures the best |
| 3 | The Darb | 115 | Hughes | 2-1 | Dangerous if started |
| 1 | Thomasville | 111 | Laidley | 3-1 | Should have won last |
| 2 | Balmy | 109 | Stout | 4-1 | Outside chance |
| 4 | Lord Baby | 107 | Schutte | 5-1 | Was last; moving up |
| 7 | Falsehide | 97 | Hayward | 12-1 | Last very good |
| 6 | Lord Grand | 107 | Wall | 12-1 | Has the class |
| 8 | Cohort Miss | 103 | C. Hanford | 15-1 | Improvement needed |
| 9 | Heroine | 97 | Wagner | 20-1 | Wants cheaper company |

DON GUZMAN strikes me as the class here. The South American owned thoroughbred's most recent effort may be tossed into discard, in front of that he turned in a corking effort under 126 pounds to be beaten only a nose by Stocks. THE DARB figures to offer the contention if reserved for this number. THOMASVILLE was the victim of a stupid ride last time. Had Johnson made his move sooner, the Gratton colorbearer would have surely clubbed Cutie Face at the finish.

SIXTH—PASS UP, LEANA G., BOWDED HOURS

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 3 | Pass Up | 103 | Wall | 4-1 | Every pole a winning one |
| 5 | Leana G. | 108 | Wagner | 4-1 | Jumped in air last time |
| 4 | Crowded Hours | 112 | Ball | 4-1 | Won last; more weight |
| 2 | Playmore | 3110 | C. Hanford | 4-1 | Rates fighting chance |
| 1 | Fairy Flag | 111 | Schaefer | 4-1 | Has class to burn |
| 8 | Lovito | 101 | Stout | 15-1 | Would be surprise |

Have a hunch that PASS UP will steal a long lead and never be headed in this affair. The Codd filly is fit and fresh and ready to run the race of her life. LEANA G. cost connections a pretty penny when she paraded in the air at the track last out. Maybe that she'll perform more kindly here. CROWDED HOURS figures all dangerous despite picking up eight pounds.

DAWDLE Victor in FIRST

By ED COGSWELL

Raceland, Framingham, June 15—With six races on the afternoon card, starting Judge Mahoney got the initial event in the flat off to a straggling start promptly on time. The horses had just finished when a heavy thunder shower scattered the crowd to cover.

Dawdle, from the stable of Bayard Warren, got the best of the start and was not headed. Both Crooning Water and Justi closed very fast in the stretch, but were unable to quite get to the leader.

The Blue and Red Plate was the second race decided and was at one and one-sixteenth miles.

White Lightning and Galloping Duchess were away fast, leading the pack to the half when Ballystratford forged to the front. In the finish drive, Sir Kendall came out of the rush to grab the honors by a half length.

What Have You, owned and ridden by Frank M. Gould, this afternoon repeated his victory of a year ago in capturing the Masters Plate, a steeplechase of about two and one-half miles.

FIRST RACE—Millwood Hunt, three-year-olds and upwards, purse $600, six and one-half furlongs. Time—1:25.

MARTIN Loses 40 POINTS

New York, June 15 (AP) — The Pennsylvania monopoly on big league batting honors became even more pronounced during the past week as the one-third of the season mile post drew near with five of the Athletics clouters in the American League's "first ten" and three representatives of the Pittsburgh Pirates and one of the Phillies in similar positions in the National League.

With the marks of many of the leaders tumbling, many of the Pennsylvania group held more prominent positions than before after yesterday's games.

Doc Cramer of the Athletics hopped fro mninth place to fifth in the junior circuit while Jimmie Fox and Eric McNain moved up a notch apiece despite falling averages.

John Moore of the Phillies, who had dropped clear out of the group of leaders, returned to fourth place in the National with a .322 average and Paul Warner of the Pirates slipped back in Arky Vaughan, the Pirates' pace setter who tops both leagues, maintained his .400 average through the week with eight hits in 20 times at bat, but Bob Johnson of the A's, American League leader, 'it only six times in 26 attempts and dropped from .406 to .392.

The week's big gains among the leaders were credited to Joe Medwick of the Cardinals who moved up from third to second in the National, and to Cramer. Each picked up nine points.

In contrast, Pepper Martin of the Cards, who had been runner-up to Vaughan, suffered a 40 point loss as he bit only seven times in 40 trips to the plate.

Mr. Boston Baer Must Fight

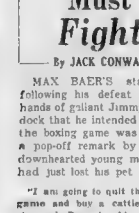
By JACK CONWAY

MAX BAER'S statement following his defeat at the hands of gallant Jimmy Braddock that he intended to quit the boxing game was merely a pop-off remark by a very downhearted young man who had just lost his pet prize.

"I am going to quit the boxing game and buy a cattle ranch," stormed Baer in his dressing room. "Ancil Hoffman has enough money, too, and we don't have to depend upon the boxing game for a living."



Mr. Boston

Three hours after Baer was listening atten tively to an offer to meet the winner of the Louis-Carnera bout in September.

"Baer cannot quit the boxing game," Pat Frayne, able sports writer, said to me. "He hasn't got any money. When he gets through paying his various managers and lawyers, there will not be a great deal of his purse left."

BAER'S end of the title purse was $75,000. When he gets through his various payoff and settles with Federal and State tax collectors, he will be fortunate if he has $20,000. Then there are some personal debts he is anxious to pay.

Baer must continue fighting whether he wishes to or not. He needs the money.

Baer's title has failed to bring him the fortune he hoped to gain. He didn't get any moving picture work as champion, and only a few theatrical engagements.

His picked up some easy money in exhibition bouts, but even this type of work was not as productive as it was at first anticipated.

Therefore Baer must keep on fighting. The champion who crowned away his title must start all over him.

$50,000 PURSE

BAER can get from $50,000 to $60,000 by meeting the winner of the Louis-Carnera bout. This is a great deal of money for a non-title match. Jimmy Braddock got only $31,246 for his championship skirmish.

Baer can re-establish himself as a front rank heavyweight by defeating the Louis-Carnera winner. Opportunity will once more be knocking at his door.

The champion who preferred to be a clown can play a serious role if he wishes to try to regain his lost laurels.

The Baer who was beaten by Braddock gave one of the most feeble attempts of defending a title in the history of the ring. He boxed as if trying to put on a slow motion picture.

There was no fire or force in his blows, while he lost spirit when he saw Braddock boxing his way to victory.

Baer proved he could fight when he knocked out Schaaf, Schmeling and Carnera. It required real class to dispose of such a trio.

Perhaps Max made the mistake of trying to burn the candle at both ends. He got more of a kick acting the part of a clown than attending to the serious business of fighting. The last laugh was on Max.

LOUIS' PUNCH

THERE is intense interest in the meeting between Louis and Carnera on June 25. This match will attract a gate of $350,000.

Louis has developed tremendous hitting power in his training bouts. Joe is a short puncher and will strive to knock Carnera out.

Louis will enter the ring a heavy favorite. This will be due to the fact that his followers from the Middle West are flooding New York with money.

The bettors will hesitate to back the favorite if the price is too long. They have not yet recovered from the setback they received when Braddock, on the short end of 8 to 1 betting, defeated Baer.

There was not a great deal of money wagered on the title match. There were few persons who were willing to risk even $1 in the hope of winning $8.

REDS Invade TEPEE

TODAY'S TILT CALLED

By Joe Cashman

Cincinnati's reconstructed Reds, the only club still unbeaten by our aroused Braves, invade the Wigwam for doubleheaders tomorrow and Monday.

Manager Charlie Dressen's collection of rookies copped the verdict on their one previous appearance here and then walloped the Warriors three in a row out in Redland.

Not that these Cincinnati youngsters are anybody's cousins or even distant relatives, even though they are in sixth place.

They come here direct from New York, where they split even in six games with the pace-setting Giants.

But if the Tribesmen can continue to display the brand of ball they played against the world's champion Cardinals, they figure not only to score their first win over the Reds but gain the edge in the engagement as well.

It would seem that Nantasket Bobby Brown would have to make his first start of the season on the Tribal hill this p. m. He's the only Wigwam hurler who hasn't seen action in the past three afternoons.

WALLY HOMERS

Braves stock will soar considerably if the Hull Howitzer turns in a creditable performance right on the heels of Somerville Danny MacFayden's brilliant comeback on Thursday.

After being practically useless since 1932, when he was the pivot mound rookie of the season, Brown showed flashes of his old form during spring training this year.

But when the race started he went wild again and was shipped to Albany, where he remained until he was recalled two weeks ago.

He returned with a blister on a finger of his throwing hand and was unable to grip a ball until a few days ago.

Bill McKechnie used all his fingers except Frankhouse and Brown as the Tribesmen were splitting the Ladies Day doubleheader with the Cards.

With a fair share of the breaks the Warriors would have grabbed off both tilts.

Trailing 4 to 2 entering the sixth inning of the opener, as a result of a Cardinal fourrun uprising against Cantwell in the fourth, the natives put the game on ice when Wally Berger came through with his eighth home run with two mates on the sacks.

EAGLES WIN Over Tufts

Boston College had no difficulty in downing the Tufts nine, 9 to 4 at Tufts Oval before 2000 students and their Senior Class Day guests.

Callahan, hurling for the Eagles for four and two-thirds innings is credited with the win, allowing eight hits, one pass, three runs and fanning three.

Coleclough's line drive struck him in the head in the fifth inning, forcing the Eagles to send in Dufley who held the Jumbos to one more run.

Lasky Hits Harder Than Max—Braddock

New York, June 13 (INS)—Max Baer is by no means the killing puncher his admirers would have everybody believe, said James J. Braddock, the new heavyweight champion, today.

"I sampled his Sunday punch and I ought to 'know,'" said the Jersey Irishman. "I also sampled the best Art Lasky had and I can assure you Lasky is a far harder hitter. Baer is an overrated puncher and fighter. With that great looking body, he had everybody thinking he could fight as good as he looked, but he can't."

HEAVY Track at SALEM

By Walter Kiley

Rockingham Park, N. H., June 15—A sudden cloudburst failed to halt the race patrons who numbered more than 25,000 as the horses paraded to the post for the first

The sun broke before the 12-horse field broke from the starting gates. The water drained fast from the track, but left it muddy.

Jockey Wholey rated Balmacan in fourth place around the far turn after Sun Teatime had set the early pace. Turning home, Balmacan, owned by Mrs. P. F. Colliteli, jumped the field and burst into the open to win by a length and a half over Sun Teatime, which had a head over De Valera for the place. The winner paid $16.60 for a two dollar ticket.

Robert Robertson's brilliant two-year-old son of Golden Broom Bright and Early, waltzed through to win the $1500 Agawam handicap, third race of five and one-half furlongs, winning by four lengths handily.

Wall took Bright and Early to the inside hitting the wire and trailing Sandy Mack in the early running and opened up distance with every stride. Only fight was for place with the Greentree Stable's Torita coming up fast in the close to take the place by a nose.

ENGLAND LEADS South Africa

Nottingham Eng. June 15 (AP)—England's batsmen piled up 118 runs with the loss of only one wicket in the opening cricket test match against South Africa today, when play was adjourned for lunch.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS

C. F. Hovey Co. 6, Gilchrist Co. 0.
Wm. Filene's Sons Co. 4, R. H White Co. 2
Conrad & Co. 4, Jordan Marsh Co. 2.

By Bill Grimes

During the fourth round of the Retail Stores Four-Ball League tournament at the Kenwood Country Club, C. F Hovey Co. not only broke the first place deadlock but practically eliminated the Gilchrist Co., not only from whatever chance that outfit had of winning the championship.

Hovey and Gilchrist were tied for the lead going into the fourth round, but Capt. Carter Hovey's charge romped through Ray Marad and his teammates, taking all six points.

As a result of the whitewashing Gilchrist dropped back into third place, William Filene's Sons Co. moving into the runner-up berth by virtue of its 4-to-2 win over R. H White Co.

Jordan Marsh Co. present holders of Hitten Cup, emblematic of the Retail Store Four-Ball League championship, ran into its fourth straight defeat, losing a 4-to-2 verdict to Conrad & Co. With only two matches to go, Jordan's is completely out of the running.

With only one veteran in its lineup, Gilchrist was not in a position to offer any worthwhile opposition to Hovey.

Under the circumstances, Marad put up a courageous fight but the ride against him were too strong. Rob Grady, former University of Alabama player, who paired with Joe Howe, took three points from Marad and "Colonel" Foss.

Brady stepped to the turn in 37 against Marad's 39, and Hovey's No. 1 team won the hole quite easily. Howe was all even going to the 8th where Marad and Howe got in trouble and lost the hole. Marad's five, one over par and on the short 9th, Joe Howe canned a six footer for a deuce and a win.

Brady's fine four at the 11th was good for a win coming home, and Marad and Howe took the 13th and 14th, respectively, with their strokes but with the match all even for the incoming nine. Bob Brady dropped a 20-footer on the home green for a birdie and a clean sweep of three points.

Psychic!

AT THE RISK OF BEING in bad taste by tooting a personal bugle, I reprint an excerpt of my Braddock-Baer semi-forecast which was better than I knew when it was written last Tuesday.

(Sic) "Here in Braddock is a man familiar with a type of hardship that bites deeper than the more heat and sweat of the training camp. The ghosts of disaster lurked in his home circle (last winter) and he was fighting, then, a more elusive, harder-hitting foe than the man he faces Thursday night.

"Perhaps when he meets Baer he will see beyond the ape-like grimaces of the champion a more sinister enemy. Perhaps his late desperation and the prospect of immediate fortune will stand at his elbow in the shape of fate and, for a brief hour, alter him from a washed-out, physical hulk, to a cold, calculating killer.

Because destiny, in its whimsical humors, sometimes tries its hand at story writing, using blood for ink and the screen of living for its scroll.

Heavyweight Bees After Titular Honey

NOW THAT IT IS over, the finish of Braddock's inspiration has sagged back to normal, and his future is secure against poverty's wolf, the rest of the heavyweight herd—Joe Louis, Prime Carnera, Max Schmeling, even Jack Sharkey (who once K.O.'d Braddock in one minute with 16-ounce pillows), will fall over each other's insteps to get first crack at the new champion in the belief that their election is as certain as the candidacy of a Democratic Senator in Louisiana.

At the moment, while the rehash of Baer's failure rages on, as is the inevitable aftermath of every heavyweight champion ship, a "Black Menace" looms in the person of a whiskey-colored Negro named Louis, and his bout with Carnera on June 25, promises to be more of a world title bout than the one which will come later between the winner and Braddock.

Perhaps another Negro champion would lead to another renaissance in the boxing industry, such as followed Jack Johnson's domination and the frenzied quest for a "white hope" that produced Jess Willard, Jack Dempsey, Gene Tunney and the golden era of the game.

The Stranger's Room

By FLOYD GIBBONS

FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

With letters streaming in from all over the countryside, the Adventurers' Club now has more than 17,000 members. More than 300 of these members are carried on the rolls. Twelve members out of that 300 are listed as Ace Adventurers, who have received the hundred dollar award for the best story of the month.

Adventurers have written and sent in 15,000,000 words on the most thrilling subject in the world—and, boy, have I had a time trying to read all of them.

I've worn out three check books, two fountain pens and four fingers. And still the club carries on. But whoa—let's get on with the story—the strange tale of ABE ALBERT, of 7309 13th avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., who got in a jam from talking to a stranger.

It was in February, 1922, that Abe left us with this stranger. He was in Ashland, Kentucky, looking for work, and while looking over the town and scouting around for job prospects, he went into a restaurant for a plate of ham and eggs.

While Abe was waiting for the order to be served, a tall, good-looking young fellow came in, walked over to Abe's table and sat down opposite him.

The waiter brought Abe's ham and eggs—took the other fellow's order, and while they ate they talked. The young lad told Abe his name was Masters, and that he had come to Ashland for the same purpose Abe had—to look for work.

"Got any money?" he asked finally.

"A little," said Abe cautiously.

He didn't tell Masters that he had a hundred and eighty dollars in his pocket—money that would have to keep him while he hunted for a job.

They finished eating, and Masters suggested that they go to a movie. After the show Abe said good night and started to leave. He intended going to a nearby hotel for the night, but Masters stopped him. "I've got a furnished room here," he said, "why not spend the night with me and save a couple of dollars?"

It sounded all right to Abe. He was only eighteen then, and knew no better than to trust a plausible stranger. They went to a nearby house and started to go to bed.

But there was something about this plausible young stranger, Masters, that made Abe distrust him. He wanted to take his money from his pocket and put it beneath his pillow.

But Abe was a sound sleeper, and Masters could easily take it from beneath the pillow without his ever noticing it. And, furthermore, to take that money out now would be to admit his having it—would show Masters where to look for it.

Abe went to bed, and for a long time he lay awake, afraid of what might happent if he went to sleep. But he was dead tired, and finally, after fighting for a long time to keep his eyes open, he dropped off and slept like a log.

But even while he slept, some sixth sense seemed to stay with him, warning him. He woke up in the middle of the night with acurious feeling that all was not well.

It was pitch dark in the room, but he knew, by feeling, that Masters was not in bed beside him. As his eyes became accustomed to the dark, he discerned the figure of his pick-up acquaintance, bending over the chair on which Abe's clothes were—holding something in his hand. MASTERS WAS GOING THROUGH HIS POCKETS.

Abe lay still watching him while he extracted his bill fold from his coat pocket. Then he went into action. He threw himself on Masters, put a headlock on him and forced him to the floor. Masters slipped out of the grip and came at Abe.

Masters was stronger than Abe and Abe knew it. Abe, on the other hand, knew a bit about wrestling, and his knowledge came in handy at that moment. As Masters reached out to grab him, Abe caught his arm in a hammerlock.

But Masters held onto the money grimly. He tried to squirm out of the grip, but Abe was fighting for more than the money now. If Masters ever got loose he might kill him to keep him quiet. So Abe held on, pushing the arm higher and higher. Finally, he heard a snap, Masters screamed, and went limp all over. Abe had dislocated his arm.

Abe got up and lit the gas. As he did so, there came a banging on the door. It was the landlady—wanting to know what had happened.

As briefly as possible Abe told her. The woman went to the telephone, and in a few minutes a tall, raw-boned policeman arrived. He took one look at Masters and smiled.

"That bird," he said, "is an escaped convict. He's wanted in Louisville for breaking jail. We got his picture this morning, along with a warning to be on the lookout for him."

The cop turned to Abe, and his smile widened into a grin. "Thanks for catching him," he said. And then he added: "But listen, young fellow, don't go spending any more nights with strangers you meet in restaurants."

And Abe never has.

I'm shipping Abe a check for ten bucks for his yarn, and hoping to do the same Albert for you—when you send in that true adventure story of yours. Monday we're going to have a regular blood-curdler. It's entitled "The Horse and Kettle," and is the adventure of John Thompson, 301 Berkeley street, Boston.

JOAN Makes Hit In Film Comedy

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Brilliant performances make a sparkling photodrama of the A. E. Thomas comedy "No More Ladies," which Boston saw last season at the Plymouth Theater with actors in the flesh.

"No More Ladies" had its screen incarnation yesterday at Loew's State Theater. Robert Montgomery and Joan Crawford starred in this attractive version, directed by the team of Edward H. Griffith and Jack Conway. Miss Crawford looks and acts much more like one of the really pleasing forms of the past few years.

George Holland

As in any of her past vehicles, Miss Crawford is both into circumstances that can be described only as lush, and in "No More Ladies" the wide-eyed effects come from more of the heart-break that always comes her way.

Joan is Marcia Townsend, a lady with understanding parents and a flippant grandmother, with much chromium furniture and several rakish motors and with the dubious fortune of being in love with Sherry Warren.

Sherry Warren is Mr. Montgomery. The role makes the actor a super-annuated collegian with a taste for women and a consciousness of his own charm.

When the marriage lapses into the doldrums and Sherry steps off-side with a banjo-playing chanteuse, Marcia accepts the challenge. She assembles one of those embarrassing house parties which only the self-possessed ladies and gentlemen of stage and screen could ever survive.

There is Franchot Tone as Jimmy Sisston, whose wife the charming Sherry had purloined away before the opening of the film; there is the purloined bride, now married to an English peer; there is the banjo-busy who first threw a spanner into the workings of Marcia's marriage. And there are Charlie Ruggles and Edna May Oliver for high comedy.

It is a gay party in a gay picture, with Sherry, as he says, well knowing. Mr. Montgomery while the peer is busy convincing the banjo-girl that the British Empire was won on the playing fields of Eton, and as Mr. Tone's ex-screen wife is lost somewhere between the pantry and the kitchen, the redoubtable Estelle still has enough courage, whisks Miss Crawford into the night for a drive that continues until the morning.

Boleslawski Assigned to Direct "The Foundry"

Los Angeles, June 15—One of the most lovable characters in Hollywood is Richard Boleslawski. Although "Boley," as his friends call him, is in the big money, his wants are simple.

Every day his wife packs his lunch and he takes it with him to the studio and each day he is confronted with a request for expenditure. Today it was a request for a dollar for a new hat. The lunch was all right, but the hat was impossible. Boley refused to give the dollar. Then Norma Talmadge's face grew with the yellow daisies created something of a scene. Then RITA KAUFMAN pals GERTRUDE ALLCOATE, now the wife of JACK ALL COATE of Film Daily, and her first husband MARSHALL NEILAN at RHAS party, they greeted each other pleasantly and few people remembered that they had been married at one time.

EDWIN ALLAN WOOLF has now accepted bridge as a necessary evil at his parties. Their we plenty of bridge, after his buffet dinner; MISS CLARK GALLI carried off honors with a high score. REGINA CREWE hostess at a luncheon for ANN ALVARADO. It was Regina's farewell gesture in Hollywood, she departed for the East by plane today after a hectic round of entertainment here.

A stag party was thrown by the WARNER BROTHERS contractioneers at the Cafe New Yorker last night. Darryl F. CLARENCE BROWN on his way to New York with a cameraman and a technical man to get background for "Ah, Wilderness." While in the East he will visit the Skowhegan stock players in Maine. One of Max Reinhardt's aims is to produce Twelfth Night in the Hollywood Bowl as he did Midsummer Night's Dream." He has been trying to get a cast and as we said before, he has invited Marion Davies, Charlie Chaplin and certain of our other stars to take part in this theatrical venture.

Shakespearean plays, in the opinion of Reinhardt, should be presented out here on the stage before they are made into a movie. Irving Thalberg apparently agrees with the German director for he is seeking to get a show on the Hollywood Bowl to present Norma Shearer in "Romeo and Juliet" before she is starred in the motion picture.

"Lucky Sharp" has been unveiled to those of us who have been waiting to see the first all-feature picture in the new Technicolor process. Hoping I'll be more enthusiastic than some of the critics who have seen it, I must say that I was disappointed. The story is weak and the color process is not perfected enough to make it a success.

The film attraction at the Orpheum this week is "The Flame Within" co-starring Ann Harding and Herbert Marshall. The plot deals with the brilliant woman psychiatrist who falls in love with her own patient. Others in the film are the newcomer, Louis Hayward, and the veteran Henry Stephenson.

Raft Shines in 'Glass Key'

By MARTIN HANNON

Raft made his first success—as the hard co-n-flipping killer of "Scarface." And after a series of unhappy miscastings, it is essentially this kind of role to which he returns in "The Glass Key." It's a good thing too for it is this kind of part which Raft handles most convincingly and skillfully.

In "The Glass Key" he is seen as Ed Beaumont, henchman to political boss Madvig, and from the top of his sleek head and tight collar to the orbs of his high-heeled shoes Beaumont is a rough and tough hombre.

He has a lot of trouble with his employer. In addition to such offenses as wearing silk socks with tweeds, Beaumont has to struggle against Madvig's infatuation for Senator Henry's snippy daughter. And to make matters worse, Madvig's daughter is running around with the senator's no-good son.

Then there are sinister threats from S n d i c a t e O'Rei, whose gambling joints have been closed by Madvig's orders. Brother Shad, who is something of a chiel at best, swears to get the boss-politician.

And it looks as though he might, when young Taylor Henry is clubbed to death, with suspicion for the murder placed on Madvig as a disapproving parent. Beaumont attempts to clear his master provide a good many thrills for the rest of the picture. It is an interesting, if somewhat moving story with good performances from everyone.

Edward Arnold exercises a peculiar charm in whatever role he a tempts, and he is part ularly good as Paul Madvig. Claire Dodd as the senator's daughter and Rosalind Keith as the politician's child are both hard to a and perform their parts adequately. Tammany Young provides comic relief as Detective Ch i n e.

2 Strong Films at RKO

By HARRIS MORGAN

Ralph Bellamy and Karen Morley in "The Healer" and "The People's Enemy," featuring Preston Foster and Lila Lee, comprise the film fare at the Keith-Boston Theater this week.

"The Healer" was adapted from Robert Herrick's novel of the same name; and whatever the virtues of the book, its screen version is at least a harmless hour of diversion.

Ralph Bellamy is cast as a young medical wonder-worker who runs a small camp for crippled children. His chief helper is Karen Morley, interested in his work and more than a little interested in the doctor himself.

The serpent enters this medical paradise in the shape of Judith Ader, who manages in an awkward entrance with a fall from her horse at Doc Holden's very gate-way. The doctor operates immediately to ease the life of the girl, and, looking particularly lovely in convalescence, she is able to get safe him to give up his camp for the sanatorium her wealthy father will build for him.

The sanatorium turns out to be a haven for nervous breakdowns and n ent-club livers. But a forest fire which threatens Holden's former bailiwick is the device which makes him see the light in last—no pun intended, we're sure.

The second attraction this week has Preston Foster in the role of a gang baron who escapes prison only to find that his wife has fallen in love with his attorney. It is pretty hectic stuff, with the tough gangster doing the right thing in the end.

Baseball Comedy

Olivia De Haviland seen in Boston the past week in Jne E. Brown's baseball comedy, "Alibi Ike," has been assigned to the cast of Warner Brothers' forthcoming production "The Irish in Us."

James Cagney, Pat O'Brien and Frank McHugh are included in the cast. The film is being directed by Lloyd Bacon.

Italian Comedian Stars at Orpheum

This genial comedian and his company m k w i t h a keen sense of response from the audience on their initial appearance at the downtown Keith-Albee house.

Pretty Betty Jane Cooper and her partners the Lathrop Brothers exhibit some good and e a s y performed dance routines. Miss Cooper, by recently returned to the United States from England where she was a great success.

'People Talk' at Scollay

The amusing comedy concerns the troubles of a suburban coup e, whose daughter has left her husband and home to come home and taunt Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland, the parents of the girl, but upon the pair shaming the couple into a reconciliation.

Charlie is to insult his wife at table and to flirt with any young and pretty girl he can find. The only difficulty is that when these things are accomplished, he finds he is a little too convinced with his acting, and withdraws herself in comfortable hauteur.

To make matters worse the girl whom Charlie picks to flirt with is married, and her husband is added to the list of those with wounded feelings.

It's a y nonsense, and a capable cast makes the most of it. In addition to Miss Boland and Mr. Ruggles, the cast includes Leila Hyams, Dean Jagger and Ka thelma Stevens.

The other Scollay feature this week is Shirley Temple in "Our Little Girl." This film is an adaptation of Florence Leighton Pfaizgraf's story of the little girl who brought about a reconciliation between her warring parents, Rosemary Ames, Lyle Talbot, and the stage star, Erin O'Brien-Moore, are included in the cast.

Studies MARKET Action

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

James R. Bancroft, president of the American Institute of Finance of Boston, writes in the bulletin released today that too many investors and traders are prone to forget percentage appreciation is the all important factor. Over the past two months the total net gains of issues such as Air Reduction, American Can, Consolidated and Eastman Kodak have been large, but reduce the gains to percentages as Mr. Bancroft does and the result is some- thing else again.

James R. Bancroft

The above method of sorting out the good from the bad plus a general market study is not responsible for the advice offered by Mr. Bancroft to lighten accounts. Further strength should be used to eliminate from holdings individual wide moving stocks. Just how far this further strength could carry the industrial section is matter of some debate in State street. Personally we are willing to allow for penetration of the 123-125 area. But previous faltering would not prevent us from jumping before that area is reached.

Sidelights: A minute with a pencil and paper shows that this talk pressure of idle money is so great that common stocks, of the blue chip type, will continue to feel it for some time is over done . . . For instance at current highs American Can yields 3½ per cent plus, Air Reduction 5 per cent minus, Allied Chemical 3½ per cent plus, and Eastman Kodak 3½ per cent plus . . . The bond market offers opportunities as good as these . . . With appreciation possibilities . . . If owners of money really think things are going to improve.

The rail and food shares are the two specific directions in which issues are inclined to look for likely purchases. The rails have crossed over the ribbon 33 mark and now seem headed for a spot somewhere around 35. Then a bit of a rest. As far as the industrial issues concerned we are interested only in those previously outlined investment situations. In the case of food or rail group we are apprehensive of a wide break. Though, for false of safety, we would limit purchases to reactions.

New England News: Industry will not do business for nothing . . . If any New Dealer has any doubts let him get in touch with the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company . . . Which is refusing to book forward orders until such time as it more nearly approaches a break-even position . . . F. W. Dodge Corp. figures for week ending June 13 reveal that building and engineering operations in New England are running about one-half of a million under the 1934 . . . Shoe and Leather Reporter finds sentiment much better in the trade . . . Shoe price advances lately have helped.

HEARST Dividend IS PAID

NET INCOME SHOWN

San Francisco, June 15—Investors in Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., today were receiving the twentieth consecutive regular quarterly cash dividend that has been distributed since the initial offering of the class "A" 7 per cent preferred shares in July 1930.

Accompanying the 20th dividend was another favorable annual report, which covers the company's operations for the 12 months ended December 31, 1934. The report shows that gross income, before all charges, amounted to $13,613,426.

Net income totaled $6,061,792, or equivalent to $3.03 per share on the entire authorized issue of 2,000,000 Class "A" 7 per cent preferred shares. Net income exceeded the annual dividend requirements of $1.75 per share by a substantial margin of $1.28 per share.

Operating revenue of Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., aggregated $36,132,345, or an increase of $4,915,489 in comparison with 1933 results. However, this gain in advertising and circulation volume was offset by an increase of $5,114,073 in operating expenses that followed the general upward trend of operating costs for industrial production.

Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., despite this fact, was in a position to further increase its earned surplus account by $1,012,580, bringing the five-year total for the company up to $14,444,229.

The report again demonstrates the ability of the publishing industry and sound management to meet successfully the problems of adverse business conditions.

PHOENIX Dividend Plan SUBMITTED

Directors of Phoenix Securities Corp. have submitted to stockholders a plan for liquidating accumulated dividends on the 68,759 shares of $3 convertible series A preferred stock, which was passed a year ago by June 30, to enable placing it on a full regular dividend basis beginning July 1, a special meeting has been called for June 27 to act on the proposal.

The plan involves payment to preferred stockholders in lieu of accumulated dividends $2 in cash and one-eighth additional share of preferred stock.

Under the recapitalization plan for Allied Stores Corp. (formerly Bon Department Stores), the letter to stockholders stated, Phoenix will receive $150,000 each out of which proposed dividends on the preferred can be made, and should the full program on Allied be carried out would receive $300,000 in receipt of current income, by way of dividends on the Allied Stores Corp. preferred stock, enough, fully sufficient to cover the future current dividend requirements on the preferred stock of your corporation to be outstanding in the event of acceptance by stockholders of the plan here proposed."

COAST FISHERIES Loss Increased

In addition there were surplus adjustment charges of $23,899 (net) making a total of $199,617 charged against surplus.

In preceding year company reported net loss of $35,180 from operations which with extraordinary charges and surplus adjustments amounting to $433,330 net, made a total charge against surplus of $470,510 in that year.

JUNGLE GOLD -:- By Rex Beach

A passion of blue white intensity had burned in this woman; in place of it now was a smouldering fire that ate her up . . . What a fate to be doomed to a life of chastity when every savage impulse in her was to love and to reproduce!

No power can prevent the fecund soil of the tropics from bursting into life; no inherited taboo had been strong enough to prevent Mamatoca from flowering into womanhood.

Poor little Bride of the Well!

This fever which charred her bones belonged to the white man. It had come with the civilization he, Steve Pentecost, had brought and in the sibling life beside him he fancied he could see the death of that wilderness he loved and feared and fought.

Some day it, too, would die, disappear.

And for what? In order that paddies might make more gold.

But no. That really wasn't the reason. Wasteful nature was being harnessed in order that an abundant economy should replace her useless prodigality.

Mamatoca, who was fertility itself, the jungle's symbol of plenty, had flung her life away in the very lavishness of her desire to reproduce, whereas the frugal, passionless Hannah had conserved hers.

She had borne children, she would live on in them.

So matters had been ordered.

Death of Mamatoca

As the sun sank and the quick night came on, Mamatoca's soul went forth to meet it.

Not until the wilderness had completely stilled did Steve know that she, too, was asleep.

A great pity, a great tenderness, an aching regret surged over him; the red-man inside his bosom wept, while the white twin stood with head uncovered.

In the early dawn he buried her on a knoll at the edge of a pasture ceiba tree, no old that it had probably looked down upon the grandeur of her people when their civilization was alive.

She had given her all to him, the little he had given in return did not even the score but it was an earnest of his debt.

And now there was need of haste if ever he was to see Garcia City again for he did not doubt that the germs of her disease were in his blood.

He traveled swiftly for several days, then aching pains slowed down his legs. He told himself they came from fatigue; that he was no longer young, but during the night he suffered a nausea.

Fever Grips Steve

At noon he rested beside a stream where a breeze fanned him; he drank the cool milk of a cocaanut.

He slept fitfully for an hour or two, then he roused himself, sheared the tip of another green cocaanut and drank from it.

Doggedly he pushed on, for the wilderness through which he tramped was endless and he knew it was unpeopled; he could not bear to die alone and unattended.

The effort of swinging his machete became increasingly difficult, the blade grew heavier, so he climbed to higher ground where there was less undergrowth and an occasional game trail would favor him.

But the sun had cut loose from its moorings, now it hung in the west or again it was drifted to some other quarter of the heavens.

The whole world had gone crazy, he decided, for rocks and trees took on unfamiliar shapes and some marched with him.

That night was like a night in the polar regions; it was six months long and bitterly cold. His teeth chattered.

He built a fire, but there was no warmth in it.

Always Climbing

Nature had lost all proportion, now he strode through a miniature forest that scarcely rose to his knees and his bursting head brushed the clouds, again he shrank to diminutive size and the trees towered taller than giant redwoods. It was terrifying.

This hallucination was followed by another even worse; his sense of hearing became enormously quickened and intensified.

The languid breeze that stirred the tree tops was exaggerated to the roar of a hurricane, the fern made a crashing, even the rustle of his clothing was unendurably loud.

It was the weakness of fever that he stumbled on hobnails through a world of hollow, vibrant brass which rang and reverberated deafeningly.

This was not altogether a new sensation to him.

As a boy he had once been ill and half delirious; the same thing had happened then.

He had felt like screaming at the sound the bedclothes made when his chest rose and fell or his hands stirred, but he had feared to do so lest he bring on contempt and ultimate chaos.

It was easier, of course, to lurch in that direction but he must go higher, higher.

A man must climb.

He could rest for a while, then he must climb again.

These were no doubt the Montanas Inexporadas of which he had heard.

Certainly no eyes had ever seen them for they rose to the very stars; there was no end to their uplift.

Once on their crest he could look down on the world, he told himself. That's where he must go; to the heights!

He'd go to the heights and prepare a place for little Steve. Stevie would rule this empire and throne must be built.

But it was hard always to be climbing, always breasting a slope; and this boy was a Peter Pan who refused to grow up . . .

No wonder: As a matter of fact, there was no son; only a grandson named Steven Pentecost —Something-or-other.

Stupid of him to forget the name of his own grandson.

The crest of the Cordillera was a long way off and he despaired of reaching it until Mamatoca came and walked beside him.

Dream City

That was good; he felt new strength. The walking was easier, too, for they were on a railroad right-of-way, and there were firm cross-ties underfoot.

From somewhere no could hear Hannah crying out to him that they were not ties at all but human bodies.

The bodies of farmer boys from the Middle West.

Now in the distance he saw the red roofs of Tegucigalpa and behind him streamed a ragged army, Dan Marchand and Don Manuel and Gunner Mattern were marching there, Steve was as tattered as they but he was proud of his rags for each was a badge of honor.

On all sides was the thud of axes, the crashing of trees and his army of workmen frantically cleared the way for his army of conquest.

He shouted at them. Faster! Faster! The job must go on.

The city came closer and he was surprised to find that it was not Tegucigalpa at all but a dream city, a city of the dead, a ruined Mayan city from the center of which rose a pyramid of great stone blocks.

Upon it sat a throne and it was occupied by a gigantic man who wore a crimson robe and a headdress of four plumes, one black, one white, one yellow and one red.

They were the colors of the Rain God. The face beneath was the face of young Steve Pentecost.

Queer! The whole thing was fantasy; these were all specters.

No! He saw a figure finally that was real, it was his daughter, Faith.

He knew she was no phantom, for he could see her so clearly; she stood in a white light and beckoned him forward, up the steps of the pyramid which overlooked the world.

But he was too tired to mount them. He was old, burned out; his march was over.

The light faded as he stumbled toward her on feet that had suddenly turned to lead.

He groped for her hand in his, then her arms enfolded him

Legend of Steve

Darkness fell. He was glad the journey had ended.

Steve Pentecost came back to Garcia City.

He returned in the shape of a heroic marble statue which stands in the square where the tourists congregate, a heroic monument of bronze looks out across the principal plaza at Tegucigalpa and both are invested with a romantic tradition which equals that of Simon Bolivar, the Deliverer of Latin-America.

One of those statues is snow white, the other is blackened by sun and rain, but the dominant Hannah Pentecost, each admirably typifies the man she married.

Once a year, until old age halted her, she placed a wreath at the base of the white memorial and always she told the same story.

The stone smiled down at her and a voice whispered; it assured her that the Mayan legend was true.

That legend can be heard from any pair of Indian lips. It is to the effect that Steve Pentecost, the Golden Giant, still lives but that he will be seen again only when the jungle creeps down and threatens to spread its green mantle over the empire he built.

The Voice of America

Approves Constitution

THE EXTRACT which we print today brings to a conclusion Senator Borah's notable speech in defense of the Constitution.

He has already made his points, and with telling effect.

Now, in the closing sentences, he slackens his pace and offers in grave and temperate words, some very pertinent and comprehensive generalizations.

The attempt to govern one hundred and thirty million people from Washington in all the local affairs of their daily life—from the farmer's wife marketing her chickens to the discretion of the husbandman in his planting and sowing—can only result, the Senator maintains, in imposing upon our people the scourge of a vast, inefficient and chaotic bureaucracy.

He likens the thousands of bureaucrats, who hang upon the necks of the taxpayers and self-dependent toilers of the Nation, to "ASCARIDAES"—which are defined as round worms, parasitic in the human intestines, sometimes called pin worms.

A very accurate description!

THESE RAVENOUS insects, as fatal to the liberty of the citizen as locusts to the field of the toiler, are laid and hatched, says Senator Borah, in the "prolific mucous of delegated power."

He calls attention to the fact that in all times of stress, people spring up who claim to be prepared and anxious to write a much better Constitution than we have and to give us a more progressive form of government.

But he reminds us that our Constitution has successfully encountered the devastating forces of two great wars and effectively met all the exigencies of more than one depression.

The Supreme Court has impaired none of these great powers—so ample, so proved, so fully tested in emergencies far graver than the present.

THEY ARE ample NOW, Senator Borah eloquently concludes, if intelligently used, to sweep away all obstacles which stand in the way of their constitutional exercise and to perform every service which a government can render to a people.

In taking our leave of this memorable speech of a great Senator, we think we express an opinion shared by all, that it is destined to a high and permanent place among the historic and patriotic utterances of our countrymen to whose lot it has fallen to speak THE TRUE VOICE OF AMERICA.

Secret of the Georges

Bared by Harvard

Geologists have long believed that the latest great change in the earth's crust along the North Atlantic occurred around 160,000,000 years ago.

Now Harvard scientists have been dredging the deep waters of the Georges Banks, favorite fishing grounds of the old New England fleets.

And they have found fossil evidence upsetting the previously accepted theories of geological stability.

The fossils indicate our coastal areas may have seen the last mighty change as recently as 30,000,000 years ago.

This is important work for scientists.

The average citizen, on the other hand, is apt to be more impressed by the progress we have made under Old Glory and the Constitution.

For it has been greater than that of all the millions of years that science brings to light with its deep-sea fossils.

Legion Sets Example

Friends Again

The Civil War ended in 1865.

The World War came to its finish only a few years ago.

Medford Post has invited veterans of the German army in the World War to march with the Legion to join in the dedication of a memorial playground.

The invitation was accepted.

So they will march, friends again.

That's the spirit that truly makes for lasting peace.

Welcome, Justice Hughes

To New England

It is with real pleasure that New England prepares to welcome Chief Justice Charles E. Hughes of the Supreme Court of the United States.

He will spend most of his summer vacation at New Castle, New Hampshire.

After the arduous duties of the past winter we feel sure he will find rest and quiet in the quaint resort that was long, long ago the capital of the state.

Better Safe Than Sorry

Fireworks

State Fire Marshal Stephen C. Garrity issues a timely warning.

He cautions Bunker Hill Day celebrators NOT to use firecrackers carelessly.

The same sound advice goes for torpedoes, which hospital records show to be nearly as great a menace in the hands of youth.

Chickens in Mail

When Ellis Butler Parker wrote "Pigs Is Pigs" thirty years ago he pictured Station Agent Flannery in a dilemma.

This bit of fiction repeated itself the other day in Clinton.

Only this time it was chickens instead of pigs.

Postmaster F. H. McIntyre found himself with twenty-five Minorcas on his hands when the party to whom they were mailed refused to pay the $3.06 due.

McIntyre promptly solved the problem by selling the chicks as "perishable" and netted Uncle Sam $1.56.

We hope Postmaster-General Farley appreciates having an employe capable of making quick, correct solutions!

Finland, Alone, Keeps an Appointment

ON THIS day war debt payments of more than one hundred and eighty million dollars are due from thirteen nations in Europe.

All of these nations were duly "notified" by our State Department.

ONE responded by saying, "We shall pay, as usual."

That honest nation is FINLAND.

The United States Government has just appropriated funds wherewith to erect a governmental building in Finland.

The act is interpreted as a gesture of appreciation to Finland—the country that is keeping international honor alive in the midst of defaulter Europe.

Due and unpaid to America to this date is a total of more than six hundred and thirty millions of borrowed money.

Year by year, the annual defaults of European debtor nations ought to serve at least one good purpose—that of a costly but effective reminder to America to keep out of all European entanglements.

In particular, let us keep out of the League of Nations and the League Court!

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

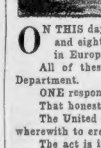
New York, June 15—I have been collecting autographed pictures to decorate a room—pictures of old established friends of whom I am especially fond and whose talents I admire. Some of the messages scrawled across them are warming. Still others a bit insulting, the muggs!



O. O. McIntyre

I asked for no one's photograph whose friendship had not undergone a test.

They will be racked in a nautilus where, when my ship comes in, I expect to spend much time in leisurely writing and philosophic contemplation. It will be a room with an open fireplace that burns real logs.

Shuffling through them before they went to the framer's, I can be pardoned a glow of pride. With one or two exceptions, all are around my age and all started from scratch. There are no silk stockinged or golden spooned lads. All had the chances American democracy bestows, and took advantage of them.

In the display will be Sinclair Lewis, Rupert Hughes, Irvin Cobb, John McCormack, Rube Goldberg, Paul Whiteman, Will Rogers, Theodore Dreiser, Roy Howard, Grantland Rice, Charles G. Norris, William Gaxton, Will H. Hays, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Jack Dempsey and too many more to enumerate. But that gives the range.

Not many writers can approach the subject of friendship and veer around without passing for a panegyric. And I am no exception.

Every one believes his friends mean more to him than friends to any one else. I'm no exception to that either. So far as I know I have no false friends. There's not one who has not done more for me, graciously and unasked, than I for him.

What so many call "lucky breaks" have been in my case the fruits of friendly gestures, many times so anonymous I did not learn the source for years. Some of the minor gestures are as warming as the big ones.

There's Jack Dempsey, who enduring the biff-bang rigors of a barn-storming tour heard he was within 50 miles of my home. He made an arduous trip over rough roads at night to visit it for an hour in the early morning, losing sleep that he needed.

Somehow one does not associate that with a mauler whose ferocious glower and ripping punches made him the greatest terror the ring has ever known. Yet one learns it's only one of a thousand gracious acts he is constantly indulging.

When I was hacking away on a ponderous, antiquated typewriter in an obscure hotel room trying, it seemed then futilely, to convince reluctant editors I had a newspaper feature worth $2 a week, there came an opulent caller.

He had hunted me out to tell me something I had written was rather good, he thought. He proved to be Charlie Norris, husband of the talented Kathleen, brother of the equally talented Frank and an arrived novelist himself. That day, for the first in many, I lived!

Also that bluest of blue days when the whole existence seemed a balmless Gilead. An accumulation of despairs made the future chaos. Things would never be right again. In almost telephathic spontaneity there came a cable from London reading:

"Are you all right?—Bill."

It was from Will Hays who had, miraculously I thought, taken time out from busy conferences to radiate light in a dark place.

Too, that lonely first day, when a rather fat job had just been shot from under me, I was trying for a toe-hold on the copy desk of the Evening Mail.

About quitting time a fellow effervescing enthusiasm and vitality came over and introduced himself. He didn't, of course, have to tell me he was the best known cartoonist of his time, Rube Goldberg, or did he have to invite me to ride uptown in his stunty green roadster. But he did.

And unknowingly renewed my waning courage immeasurably. So I could overflow many columns of those splendid and simple acts of graciousness that mean so much in retrospect—fidelities that mean me a lifelong debtor to Webster, Bob Brinkerhoff, Ryley Cooper, Gene Buck, Floyd Gibbons, et al, and to two who are gone, Will Hogg and Arthur Roche.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Waiting For Something To Happen

Elsie Robinson

Give it a new meaning—fill you with power and passion—banish the drabness forever—

Waiting for something to happen. All your life you have been like that, haven't you? Like a little kid, sitting on the edge of a curb, waiting for the circus parade to come crashing round the corner—

No, you don't talk much about it. Used to, when you were younger.

Used to dream then, and plan. Plan gorgeously! Splendid rebellions. Shining romance and adventure. And you thought, then, that it might happen any day. But somehow it didn't. Instead life grew steadily drearier.

WAITING WITH HOPE

But still you went right on waiting—no matter how often you failed—no matter how grimly the years closed around you—that some secret thrilling certainty went on and on.

Some day, somewhere, something was going to happen to you. Something Wonderful—

Not just a lucky break. Bigger than that. A whole new start—The sort of a chance you've always wanted—always felt you were meant to have.

That's the real core of it all. It isn't just that you want or need a fresh start—you feel you were meant to have it. Life, you're sure, was never intended to be like this.

Empty and aimless Life was planned to be hot and swift and sweet—filled with high hopes, great hunger. And some day, in spite of everything, things would be like that. When your chance comes—

Waiting for something to happen. Is it childish to feel like that? Are you just kidding yourself? NO, YOU'RE NOT! IT'S TRUE. No matter how old you are, how weary or worried or desperate, life SHOULD have, COULD have, its great adventure. It IS your right—and it can be had!

Then why has it never come?

BECAUSE YOU'VE ALWAYS LOOKED FOR IT IN THE WRONG PLACE.

YOUR NEW DEAL

You've always looked OUTSIDE for your new deal—like the little tad waiting for the circus to come round the corner.

You've always expected that something OUTSIDE YOURSELF was going to hand you your big opportunity—someone you loved or the Boss or Society or Fate. And perhaps you've repeated to yourself that verse which has comforted so many—

"Serene I fold my hands and wait,
"Nor care for wind or tide nor sea;
"I rave no more 'gainst time or fate,
"For lo! my own shall come to me."

Yes, some day YOUR "own" would come to you, too. And so you've waited. But you've been wrong. Your "own" isn't coming to you. You have it already! It lies ready, locked within your own mind and heart, waiting for its release.

Waiting for something to happen—You've never needed to wait a day. You could—you can—start that Something Wonderful happening any second you choose. FOR THE MAKINGS ARE ALL WITHIN YOURSELF AND HAVE BEEN ALL YOUR LIFE.

STOP WAITING!

Why have you felt so sure that some day you'd have your chance? Because you have always had it, right in your own grasp, and didn't know it.

Why have you felt that life should hold laughter and song, fire and splendid fury? Because it HAS held these things, dumbly, darkly, in the depths of your own nature.

Waiting for something to happen? Stop waiting! Let it start happening—NOW. Stop dreaming. Begin living your own reality . . . letting loose the strength and beauty within yourself.

"But how?" you cry.

By doing or daring anything NEW that will lift you out of the rut, force you into a new trail. That's all you need—a start. The simplest challenge or risk will set you off on that start. And then—?

You'll not be waiting any more. For Something Wonderful will be happening TO and THROUGH every corner of your soul.

Difficulties

By Edgar A. Guest

I met an old man yesterday
And this he said to me:
"It wasn't on the level way
Adventure came to me;
And looking back on pleasures flown,
It all is very plain.
The sweetest thrills I've ever known
Were difficult to gain.

"I used to fret and grieve and sigh
And shake my head in doubt,
And wonder through the weeks if I
Could work my problem out.
I used to wish that I could find
Some easy task to do.
That difficulties can be kind
Back then I never knew.

"Time was I thought that toil was grim
And ease and pleasure sweet.
I used to sit and envy him
Who had no odds to meet,
And yet I've found, when all is done
And count the gains I've made,
The happiest victories I've won
Were when I was afraid.

"The easy task has naught to give
Of pleasure and of pride.
The man who joyously would live
Must have his courage tried.
For difficulty and despair
And danger and defeat
And disappointments hard to bear
Are what make victory sweet."

Government And The Federal Constitution

By HON. WILLIAM E. BORAH

United States Senator from Idaho

In a Radio Address

(EDITOR'S NOTE—Following the recent momentous Supreme Court decisions on constitutional government Senator Borah delivered an address on government and the Constitution which ranks among the most notable speeches in American history. Because of its importance in our political annals and in the present status of government, Senator Borah's address has been reprinted in installments in this column. Following is the sixth and final installment.)

BEFORE we fully make up our minds, therefore, to govern permanently 130 million people from Washington in all their local affairs of daily life, from the farmer's wife marketing her chickens to the discretion of the husbandman in his planting and sowing, let us bear in mind that these things cannot be done, cannot even be overseen by a President. It is not humanly possible.

These things are done by thousands of bureaucratic ascaridaes whose glory is the display of arbitrary power. Let us bear in mind that in the prolific mucous of delegated power are laid and hatched these ravenous insects as fatal to the liberty of the citizen as the locusts to the field of the toiler.

I rejoice that the President is putting an end to these activities and is giving rein to the initiative, the personal aims and ambitions, the judgment of the citizen touching his own personal affairs. The value of this in the matter of recovery cannot be overestimated.

In conclusion, I do not wish to be understood as contending that the Constitution is a sacred document never to undergo amendment.

Neither do I wish it to be inferred that the decisions of the Supreme Court are above the consideration and criticism of the people.

BUT I do wish to be understood as contending that the great underlying principles of the American Constitution are indispensable to a republican form of government—that to strike at those underlying principles is to strike at the life of representative democracy.

I do not forget either in these days that hardly had the Constitution been adopted before there were those who declared it unworkable, inadequate, and a failure.

There has never been a time of stress in our history when there were not those who were fully prepared and anxious to write a much better Constitution and give up a more progressive form of government.

But in spite of doubts and fear and against all emergencies and in spite of the efforts of impatient critics the work of the combined views of Hamilton and Jefferson lived on. Under it the nation has grown in strength and grandeur. The people have advanced in all things which contribute to responsible citizenship.

It has successfully encountered the devastating forces of two great wars and effectively met the exigencies of more than one depression.

It has accomplished these things not only because of its inherent worth but also because in a large measure of the respect for and faith in the Constitution upon the part of the people, a thing which should at no time be underestimated.

WE all appreciate the serious task devolving upon the general government at this time, but the constitutional powers which have been sufficient to deal with the great emergencies of the past we still enjoy unimpaired.

The decision of the Supreme Court curtails them in no respect.

These powers of the national government under the Constitution are very great—they were designed to be and are equal to all the demands of a powerful nation in distress if faithfully and patiently employed.

They seem to be ample now as they have been at all times to sweep away all obstacles which stand in the way of their constitutional exercise.

The power to regulate and control interstate commerce is full and complete. It may be that greater care and more patient consideration of measures are required. But the country need not doubt, it seems to me, that the constitutional authority is sufficient to meet the emergency at hand.

'Dear Govt.' -:- By Winston Norman

Facts-of-Life Department,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Dept.:

FOR Heaven's Sake, please have Congress pass a U. S. Law to make people keep their pants & skirts on, because my wife Mabel has suddenly got Nudeism on the brain, and if this Hot Weather keeps up it looks like she will break out with Nudeism all over.

"Clothes off is a beautiful thing," says Mabel, "so let's us join a Colony & be free, just running around real simple with no more Shame or Laundry Bills."

But I put my foot down on her, I says:

"There won't be none of those clothes-off tricks, not in this family." I says, "except you do them in the Bathtub with a cake of soap."

So then I reminded Mabel about the awful thing that Nudeism done to me, the time I took it up by accident.

We was attending a Forth of July Picnic with a lot of nice people from both sexes, & I was laying there on the ground, eating a sandwich, when all of a sudden a Hornet flew up my Pant Leg & begun to sting me.

I give a yelp and reach for where the Hornet was, but he had went somewheres else & still stinging me, so I couldn't stand it no longer, I done the only thing a man can do with a Hornet up his Pant Leg.

But when I got them off, all of the Ladys on the Picnic begun to scream, and they have never spoke to I or Mabel since then.

"So there was a Horrible Example of Nudeism," I says to Mabel, "and I can still hear those Ladys screaming."

But Mabel just give a sniff, she says:

So I says I do nothing with my wife, and what we need is a U. S. Law, because it is just like Abraham Lincoln said, this nation can't go on ½ nudeist and ½ Dressed.

I was talking to my neighbor about the Nudest Menace. I told him, "We got to crack down on them, or the 1st th'ng you know they will form a ½rd Party & elect a Nudeist President, they will make 120,000,000 U. S. People run around without a stitch on."

But he is a Republican & he says, "There won't be no 3rd Party, because the New Deal & Nudeism is twin brothers."

I asked him how they was twin brothers, & he says, "because the NRA and AAA has stripped us down to our last BVD, and the Nudeists is coaxing us to take that off, so between the New Deal and Nudeism we will be Stark Naked before the next election comes along."

Yrs. very truly,
W. Norman.
